Collection Description

Biographical Note

The first meeting of the Emory Medical History Club was held in the Wesley Memorial Hospital library on October 23, 1923. Taken from the Bulletin of the Fulton County Medical Society,

Emory Libraries provides copies of its finding aids for use only in research and private study. Copies supplied may not be copied for others or otherwise distributed without prior consent of the holding repository.

"believing that modern medicine can be better appreciated and practiced by a more intimate knowledge of medicine of the past, papers have been prepared and read on the lives and times of various men, such as Oliver Wendell Holmes, Brown-Sequard, Ephraim McDowall, Marion Sims, Louis Pasteur, Willis Westmoreland, Abner W. Calhoun, Sir Victor Horsely, Benjamin Rush and others." The club's president was J. Calvin Weaver of Atlanta, with William Willis Anderson serving as secretary.

Membership in the club required eligibility in the Fulton County Medical Society. The club remained in operation until it was disbanded on February 21, 1929.

Scope and Content Note

This collection consists of general information related to the Emory Medical History Club, including minutes, correspondence, and postcards notifying members of upcoming meetings. The remainder of the collection are papers of presentations given by either members of the Emory Medical History Club or invited guest speakers.

Arrangement Note

Organized alphabetically by author.
