Collection Description

Biographical Note

Harold Joseph Berman, professor of law and historian, was born in Hartford, Connecticut, on February 13, 1918 to Saul and Emma Kaplan Berman. He earned a B.A. in social philosophy from Dartmouth College in 1938, a Certificate of Graduate Studies from the London School of Economics in 1939, and an M.A. in history from Yale University in 1942. While working towards his M.A. at Yale he also studied law, intending to earn an LL.B., but his legal education was interrupted by the World War II. He entered the U.S. Army in July 1942 and served in Europe until 1945. After the war he returned to Yale, where he completed his LL.B. in 1947. He married Ruth Carol Harlow on June 10, 1941; they had two sons and two daughters.

Berman's first professional position was Assistant Professor of Law at Stanford University during the 1947-1948 academic year. He accepted a post as Visiting Professor of Law at Harvard University in 1948, became Assistant Professor of Law in 1949, and eventually held two chairs: Joseph Story Professor of Law from 1973 to 1976 and James Barr Ames Professor of Law from 1976 to 1985. At Harvard, Berman flourished as a specialist in Soviet law and private international law. He established relationships with scholars in the U.S.S.R. and other eastern European countries, and he traveled to the Soviet Union many times. In addition to teaching and writing, Berman worked as a consultant to law firms and businessmen on legal aspects of trade and investment in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

Later in his Harvard career, Berman spent more time pursuing his interest in the dialectics of law and religion in Western history. In 1974, he published The Interaction of Law and Religion, a collection of lectures he had delivered at Boston University in 1971. His major work, Law and Revolution: The Formation of the Western Legal Tradition, was published in 1983, and won the American Bar Association's SCRIBES Book Award.

Berman left Harvard in 1985 to become the first Robert W. Woodruff Professor of Law at Emory University, a position he held until his death in 2007. He aided in the development of Emory's interdisciplinary law and religion program, founded in 1982, now known as the Center for the Study of Law and Religion (CSLR). He was also a Senior Fellow at CSLR.

After the fall of the Soviet Union, Berman continued to promote Russian studies, and he taught courses on problems and trends in Russian law. In 1997, he co-founded the World Law Institute with the mission of sponsoring education in fields of law relating to the world economy, world organizations, and the emerging international common law of human rights, protection of the environment, and procedures of dispute settlement.

Professor Berman died on November 13, 2007 in New York.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of the professional and personal papers of Harold J. Berman from 1938 to 2013. The bulk of the collection consists of Berman's extensive collection of writings that span his career. Materials include early drafts and notes from many of his books including Law and Language: Effective Symbols of Community, drafts and publications of numerous articles and other writings by Berman, as well as statements, book reviews, and writings of others. Also includes correspondence to and from scholars, jurists, government officials, students, friends, and family. Prominent correspondents include: Jimmy Carter, Erwin Griswold, John T. Noonan, Jr., and Eugen Rosenstock-Huussy.

The collection records Berman's activities as a faculty member at Harvard University and Emory University; his work as a writer, lecturer, and consultant; and his intellectual development as an historian.

Arrangement Note

Organized into twelve series: (1) Correspondence, (2) Writings, (3) Harvard University, (4) Emory University, (5) Subject files, (6) Eugen Rosenstock-Huussy, (7) Consulting work, (8) Conferences and speaking engagements, (9) Photographs, (10) Other Papers, (11) Russian Periodicals, and (12) Additions.

Series 1
Correspondence, 1948-2007
Boxes 1-18

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of the correspondence of the Harold J. Berman including general correspondence, student correspondence, and colleague recommendations. The majority of the series contains general correspondence, divided between Berman's Harvard University years and his Emory University years, from scholars at other institutions that relate to Berman's work in Soviet law, international commercial law, and legal history. The general correspondence also includes family correspondence.

The student correspondence and colleague recommendations are also divided between Berman's Harvard years and his Emory years.

Arrangement Note

Organized into three subseries: (1.1) General correspondence, (1.2) Student correspondence, and (1.3) Colleague recommendations.

Subseries 1.1
General correspondence, 1948-2007
Boxes 1-16

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of general correspondence to Harold Berman from 1948-2007. The correspondence is divided into two sections: correspondence from 1948 to 1984, when Berman was at Harvard University; and correspondence from 1985 to 2007, when Berman was at Emory University. Most of these letters are from scholars at other institutions, and they relate to Berman's work in Soviet law, international commercial law, and legal history. There are many letters from scholars in the Soviet Union and eastern Europe. Letters from Berman's family members are also filed here. Berman often saved carbon copies of his own outgoing letters, and most of this series includes incoming and outgoing correspondence.

Arrangement Note

Arranged first by college, then alphabetically by surname.

Series 3
Harvard University, 1951-1999
Boxes 24-26

Scope and Content Note

This series contains materials related to Professor Berman's years on the faculty of Harvard Law School. Berman was a full-time Harvard faculty member from 1948 to 1985, and became emeritus when he left to join the Emory faculty. Because he maintained contacts with Harvard after he departed, some documents in this series date from his post-Harvard years.

Correspondence with other faculty members on general administrative matters is arranged alphabetically by surname, and then chronologically. Erwin Griswold, Dean of Harvard Law School from 1946 to 1967, is Berman's most frequent correspondent in this series.

The subject files contain correspondence and other materials on specific topics, and are arranged alphabetically by topic. They cover Berman's work with special graduate students and Soviet scholars, his participation in Harvard's research project on the development of Israeli law, and his own research projects, primarily in international law.

Series 4
Emory University, 1973-2007
Boxes 27-32

Scope and Content Note

This series consists of materials related to Berman's time on the faculty of the Emory University School of Law. Berman arrived at Emory in 1985, remaining on its faculty until his death in 2007. The earliest documents here are letters between Berman and Tibor Varady, written when Berman was still at Harvard. Varady later joined the law faculty at Emory. Correspondence with John Witte, Jr. also dates from Berman's last years at Harvard. Varady and Witte are Berman's most frequent correspondents in this series.

General correspondence contains letters to and from other Emory faculty members, usually on general administrative matters. This subseries is arranged alphabetically by surname, and then chronologically.

Files on the American Law Center in Moscow mostly contain correspondence about Emory's program of instruction in American law for Russian lawyers. The materials document Berman's leading role in this program. Correspondence files are arranged alphabetically by surname, and then chronologically. Other files are arranged alphabetically by topic or type of material.

The subject files contain correspondence and other materials on specific topics, and are arranged alphabetically by topic. The bulk of the material relates to the Soviet and Russian scholars who visited Emory at Berman's invitation. There is also a large amount of material on the World Law Institute, which Berman co-founded in 1997. The file on the Law and Religion Program contains some correspondence with John Witte, but most of Witte's letters are filed in Subseries 4.1: General correspondence.

Series 6
Eugen Rosenstock-Huessy, 1938-2001
Box 35

Scope and Content Note

Berman's long friendship with the German scholar of history, law, and religion, Eugen Rosenstock-Huessy, began at Dartmouth College in the 1930s. Rosenstock-Huessy taught Berman at Dartmouth, and this experience prompted Berman to study legal history at the London School of Economics. It was during his time in London that Berman first conceived of the work that would become Law and Revolution: The Formation of the Western Legal Tradition. This book and Law and Revolution II: The Impact of the Protestant Reformations on the Western Legal Tradition build on Rosenstock-Huessy's integrative, interdisciplinary scholarship.

This series consists of correspondence and collected material related to Berman's relationship with Rosenstock-Huessy. There are two folders of correspondence between Berman and Rosenstock-Huessy. Berman also corresponded with members of Rosenstock-Huessy's family and with Rosenstock-Huessy's close friend Freya Von Moltke. Correspondence is arranged alphabetically by surname. Other material is arranged alphabetically in a subject file format.

There are many other correspondents connected with Rosenstock-Huessy whose letters to Berman are dispersed throughout the collection. These include Mather Eliot, Alan Hanbury-Sparrow, Cynthia O. Harris, Rudolph Hermeier, George Morgan, Page Smith, and Harold Stahmer. Their correspondence is filed alphabetically in Subseries 1.1: General correspondence.
