Collection Description

Biographical Note
The origins of the Center for the Study of Law and Religion began in 1982 when Emory founded a program in law and religion as part of its mission to build an interdisciplinary university and to increase understanding of the fundamental role religion has played in shaping law, politics, and society. Founded by Emory President James T. Laney and Emory Law Professor Frank S. Alexander, today the Center for the Study of Law and Religion offers six degree programs, pursues multi-year research projects, has produced more than 300 books, and hosts major international conferences and distinguished lecture series.

Scope and Content Note
The records of the Center for the Study of Law and Religion consists mostly of papers related to research projects, with the topics including cultural transformation and human rights in Africa, Islamic family law, sex, marriage, and family life, and the child in law, religion, and society. Also included are invitations, lectures, and printed materials.

Arrangement Note
Organized alphabetically by title.
