Collection Description

Biographical Note

The Oxford Local History collection contains information on Oxford College of Emory University from throughout its history, beginning with reproductions of the Emory College charter written in 1836 to the turn of the 21st century. The information found in this collection is in the form of publications and clippings, as well as compiled material and research notes carried out by Oxford library staff for quick reference. Topics in this collection includes Emory College during the Civil War, Emory's move to Atlanta, Emory's unofficial mascot Dooley, and numerous other topics and events related to Oxford College.

Also included is a comprehensive collection of biographical files from members of Oxford College or the local area. These files are predominantly clippings taken from newspapers and magazines that were compiled by library staff over the years. Furthermore, the collection also includes subject files related to Newton County and the towns of Covington and Oxford, Georgia. This material includes statistics, historical information, and local news stories.

Scope and Content Note

This collection consists of a comprehensive arrangement of clippings, publications, and other material related to Oxford College of Emory University as well as the surrounding local areas of Covington and Newton county. This collection was created by members of the Oxford College Library staff as materials came into the library that referred to news related to Oxford College of the local area.

Arrangement Note

Arranged by biographical and subject files, then alphabetically.
