Collection DescriptionBiographical Note

The Georgia Conference Manual Labor School was organized by the Georgia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church and chartered by the General Assembly of Georgia in 1834. The first students enrolled in 1835, and by 1836 the Manual Labor School trustees had begun to favor the idea of extending the school's charter to provide for a university-type educational institute authorized to award diplomas and to grant degrees in literary study. To fulfill that new purpose, Emory College was organized by the trustees of the Manual Labor School under the authority of the Georgia Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The new college was chartered by the General Assembly of Georgia on December 10, 1836. The original Manual Labor School was never a financial success and continued as a separate entity until July 22, 1840. At a joint meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Manual Labor School and Emory College on that date, the two Boards merged and the Manual Labor School officially transferred all its assets and liabilities to Emory College.

The original charter of Emory College was amended on October 31, 1870 to recognize the formal relationships of the North Georgia Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the South Georgia Annual Conference, Methodist Church, South; and the Florida Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South to the Board of Trustees and the College.

Emory University was chartered on January 25, 1915 with members of the Educational Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, serving also as the Board of Trustees for the new university. On March 17, 1915 the charter of Emory College was again amended to allow Emory College to become the college of Emory University. On March 31, 1915, the Emory University Board of Trustees elected a new Board for Emory College from among their own, and on April 1 1915, the formal and legal transfer of the assets and affairs of Emory College to Emory University took place.

The College continued to function at its original campus at Oxford until the summer of 1919, when it was transferred to the new Emory University campus in Atlanta. The last meeting of a separate Board of Trustees for Emory College took place on June 7, 1919 at Oxford, in conjunction with commencement.
