health problems and underwent a series of surgical operations. At the time this manuscript was written, Thacker resided in Fort Wayne, Indiana.

Scope and Content Note

This carbon copy manuscript consists of three hundred and fifty-five typewritten pages with handwritten editing marks. It examines the ethical implications of Communism and Democracy, as advocated by the U.S.S.R. and the United States during the Cold War period. Rejecting both ideologies, Thacker recommends a Christian approach to living in which the individual enters into a personal fellowship with God.
