Source
This volume was donated to the library by Eliza Allison Barry (1846-1922), the wife of Osgood Andrew Barry (1847-1907). On July 3, 1915, Bishop Joseph S. Key presented the volume to Bishop Warren Akin Candler on behalf of Mrs. Barry. According to a tipped-in note, the collection had been in O. A. Barry's family since antebellum times. The note reports that O. A. Barry's father, Judge George La Vallon Barry, had marked the abolitionists in the collection with a capital A beneath the image and an X on the page (ten portraits in the collection bear these markings).

Collection Description

Historical Note
This collection contains images of Methodist theologians, leaders, and clergy members, as well as scenes of a few notable places within the Methodist church. All of the images are engravings. A number of notable engravers are credited, for example Thomas Illman, E. Mackenzie (Methodist Book Concern), J. W. Paradise, William D. Smith, and Thomas B. Welch. Many of the engravings were published at the Methodist Book Room in New York.

Though the exact date of this collection is uncertain, it was likely completed and bound in the middle of the nineteenth century. The portrait of Robert Newton refers to his service in the Wesleyan Methodist Conference in 1840 and so the dates can be narrowed down to some time between 1840 and 1861.

Scope and Content Note
There are forty-five engravings contained in this bound collection. Forty-one are portraits of Methodist leaders from the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, particularly ones with ties to American Methodism. Three engravings are Methodist places (the Methodist Book Concern in New York; Milbrook, the residence of Adam Clarke; and the John Street Methodist Church in New York). There is also one engraving of The Last Supper as painted by Benjamin West. See the contents list below for a detailed list of the engravings.
