Collection Description

Historical Note

The Bardo Matrix Press was founded in Kathmandu, Nepal, in the early 1970s by original Velvet Underground drummer, artist, and poet, Angus MacLise, and poet, photographer, and publisher, Ira Cohen. The press, which focused on counterculture and poetry publications, issued pamphlets, booklets, posters, books, and broadsides by Paul Bowles, Ira Cohen, Gregory Corso, Diane Di Prima, Charles Henri Ford, and Angus MacLise, among others. The publications were printed in editions of anywhere from a couple of dozen to a few hundred, usually utilizing fine printing techniques, such as wood blocks, letterpress, special inks, Tibetan-style bindings and bookmaking techniques, and handmade paper, primarily rice paper. Ira Cohen began the Starstream poetry series under the Bardo Matrix imprint in 1974 with John Chick. The press operated a small bookshop in Kathmandu that sold these publications, wood-block printed headshop posters, poetry broadsides and second-hand English language paperback books. The press diminished and then closed after the 1979 death of Angus MacLise. Ira Cohen returned to New York City, New York, where he lived until his passing in 2011.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of artwork, photographs, printed material and promotional material created by Bardo Matrix from 1966-2009, as well as correspondence to and from two of the primary founders of the press, Ira Cohen and Angus MacLise. The majority of the material concerns Ira Cohen's work and was printed in Kathmandu, Nepal.

Arrangement Note
