Collection Description

Biographical Note
Samuel Beckett (1906-1989), Irish poet, novelist and playwright, was born in Foxrock, Ireland, a suburb of Dublin. He attended the Portora Royal School in Enniskillen, Northern Ireland, from 1919-1923, and in 1924 he enrolled at Trinity College in Dublin where he studied French and Italian. In 1927, Beckett moved to Paris and taught English at the École Normale Supérieure. While there, he met James Joyce and began to mingle in French literary circles. In 1930, he published his first poem, "Whoroscope," and returned to Trinity College to teach French.

In the 1930s, Beckett traveled around Europe and began publishing more of his work, including the essay Proust (1931); a volume of short stories entitled More Pricks than Kicks (1934); a volume of poetry entitled Echo's Bones and Other Precipitates (1935); and a novel, Murphy (1938). In 1937, he returned to Paris permanently and the following year began a relationship with Suzanne Déchevaux-Dumesnil (the couple married in 1961). Following the German invasion of France during World War II, Beckett joined the French Resistance. He worked as a courier and stored armaments in his backyard, acts for which he was awarded the Croix de Guerre and the Médaille de la Résistance.

Beckett continued to publish novels throughout the 1950s, 1960s, and 1970s, including Molloy (1951), Malone Dies (1951), The Unnamable (1953), Watt (1935), How It Is (1961), and Mercier and Camier (1974). However, it is the plays he produced during this time for which he is perhaps best known. They include Waiting for Godot (1953), Endgame (1957), Krapp's Last Tape (1958) and Happy Days (1961). He won the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1969, and continued to write and publish poems and short stories until his death in 1989.
