Collection Description

Historical Note
Black Masks is a bi-monthly magazine that covers African-American theater and entertainment including literary and visual arts, featuring profiles of black performing artists and black arts. It was created by playwright Beth Turner who has acted as its editor and publisher since its beginnings as a newsletter in 1984. Originally based in New York City, the magazine is now hosted in Athens, Georgia.

Scope and Content Note
The collection consists of the records of Black Masks, the Black Theater Magazine from circa 1984-2012. The records include photographs, printed materials, research files, administrative records, posters, and publicity relating to the management of the magazine and the topics covered by the serial.
