Collection Description

Historical Note
The Blue Rat Gallery, an Atlanta, Georgia, art collective, was founded in the Pershing Point Apartments in 1983. Pershing Point residents and artists Stephanie Ayers [Dean], Clark Brown, James Farmer, Karen Hennessee, and Chick Lockerman rented a vacant apartment in the building where they hosted the gallery's first show. They held only one exhibition in the apartment before moving temporarily to a vacant stable underneath Peachtree Street; after three shows in that location, they moved back to Pershing Point, this time to the basement. With demolition of the apartment building looming, the group moved one final time to 1044 West Peachtree Street, where they continued to live and host exhibitions, performances, and other events until 1987 when the group disbanded.

Popular with punks and other counter-cultural elements of Atlanta's Midtown neighborhood, shows at the Blue Rat frequently featured local artists working in a variety of genres and media. Such events as "Hang It and Show," where artists were invited to bring their work and display it on a first come, first served basis until the gallery was full, and a show where the gallery was opened and guests were invited to graffit the walls, promoted the group's do-it-yourself ethos. Though the core collective consisted of the original five founders (later joined by Tim Barrett), numerous Atlanta artists exhibited or performed regularly at the space including Jay Wiggins, Bob Burden, Phreddie Vomit, The Nightporters, Kennan Raines, D'Angelo Dixon, Bobby Burns, Oliver David, Arms Akimbo, and Chris Wood along with his band The Restraints. The gallery also hosted an exhibition of works by nationally known folk artist Howard Finster and family members.

Scope and Content Note
The collection consists of materials relating to the Blue Rat Gallery from 1983-2007 and includes administrative records, artwork, audiovisual material, photographs and scrapbooks, and promotional material. Administrative records contain artist agreements and biographies, financial records, a small amount of correspondence, meeting notes, and a guest register that includes names of visitors to numerous gallery shows. James Farmer's audiovisual recordings are primarily of gallery events, including audience footage; performances by The Nightporters, Teenz n Heat, and the Section Eight Dancers; poetry readings by Jay Wiggins, Phreddie Vomit, and Kennan Raines; and numerous exhibition openings. One film, "Carrot Man," was an attempt by Bob Burden, along with Clark Brown, James Farmer and others, to experiment with a live-action version of Burden's comic book Flaming Carrot.

Photographs and scrapbooks include both photography by Blue Rat artists and candid snapshots of events in various gallery spaces. The scrapbook includes photographs, clippings, and promotional material from Blue Rat events from 1983-1987. It was originally created by Karen Hennessee, then continued by Clark Brown around 1986. Promotional material contains clippings, fliers, post cards, stickers, and other items advertising events at the Blue Rat Gallery.

Arrangement Note
Arranged by record type.
