Collection Description

Biographical Note

Caresse Crosby (1892-1970) co-founded the Black Sun Press with her husband, Harry Crosby, in 1927 under the name Éditions Narcisse. They primarily published books in English for the American expatriate literary circles in Paris, supporting some of the earliest works by authors such as James Joyce, Kay Boyle, and D. H. Lawrence. After Harry's death in 1929, Caresse continued to publish and support artists in America, France, Italy, and Greece and acted as publisher of the Black Sun Press until 1950. Among her many publishing ventures, one of her most significant was Portfolio: An Intercontinental Quarterly (1945-1947). Only six issues were published, but the literary journal featured important writers and artists of the period, such as Charles Bukowski, Henri Cartier-Bresson, Albert Camus, and Pablo Picasso. D.H. Lawrence scholar and professor of English at Southern Illinois University, Harry Thornton Moore was the assistant editor for volume one of Portfolio: An Intercontinental Quarterly. Crosby appointed Moore as the executor of the Crosby Library and assisted with Moore's biography on D. H. Lawrence. Crosby spent the last part of her life working as a peace activist and died at her home, a 15th century castle in Italy called the Castello de Rocca Siniblada.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of correspondence, printed material, and other documents relating to Caresse Crosby and her work with the Black Sun Press. Correspondence contains letters between Crosby and Thornton Moore, C.K. Ogden, and Dorothea Tanning, as well as a letter from Aldous Huxley to Caresse Crosby's husband and business partner, Harry Crosby. Correspondence documents issues relating to the publication of Black Sun Press novels and also includes Crosby's letters about Thornton Moore's role as the Crosby Library executor in which she suggests possible locations for the collection. The correspondence also documents Crosby's thoughts about travel and literature, as well as Moore's biographical projects on D. H. Lawrence. Letters removed from books that form part of the Danowski Poetry Library are noted in the container list.

Printed material includes all of the prospectuses for the serial, Portfolio: An Intercontinental Quarterly, published by the Black Sun Press from 1945-1947, as well as broadsides and order forms relating to the Crosbys and Black Sun Press authors. The collection also contains two Harry Crosby calling cards, photographs, and typescripts of two poems by Harry Crosby, "Bilitis" and "Water Lilies."

Arrangement Note

Arranged by record type.
