Collection Description

Biographical Note

The Cuala Press was established by the Yeats family in 1902. It operated under the name Dun Emer outside the village of Dundrum, Ireland until 1908 when it moved to Churchtown, Ireland, and changed its name to Cuala Press. It moved to Dublin in 1923 and continued publishing until 1946. At that time it published only greeting cards and prints until its revival as a press in 1969 by the present Yeats generation and others.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of material concerning Cuala Press. The majority of the collection contains hand colored greeting cards printed at the Cuala Press from ca. 1908-1969. The cards are illustrated, embellished with text, and numbered. The collection also includes a letter from George Russell to a Yeats family member concerning the publication of a number of poems.
