Collection Description

Administrative History

Founded January 18, 1919 at the Druid Hills Golf Club, the Emory University Woman's Club began with a representation of faculty and administrators' wives from the School of Theology, Law, and Medicine. This group organized with the purpose "to foster more social life among its members, to promote the welfare of the student body and to further the interests of the University in every way possible." The membership grew with the moving of the Liberal Arts faculty from Oxford, Georgia, to Atlanta in October of that same year.

Scope and Content Note

The Emory University Woman's Club records provide a continuous picture of the Club's history. Club activities described here range from hosting faculty parties and University receptions to fundraising for the University and engaging in volunteer civic work in the Emory community. The records document from a unique perspective many aspects of the history, growth, and development of the University. They reflect some of the effects of historic and social trends on Emory and on women and give evidence of the broadening of the Club's membership to include women who were faculty and staff members in their own right.

Arrangement Note

Organized into seven series: (1) General records, (2) Minutes, (3) Subject files, (4) Interest groups, (5) Committees, (6) Scrapbooks, (7) Publications, and (8) Unprocessed additions.
