Collection Description

Administrative History

National sororities at Emory began as social clubs that were organized soon after the Emory College of Arts and Sciences became a coeducational institution in 1954. The clubs were coordinated by the Interclub Council. In 1958 the Student Organizations and Activities Committee of the Student Council recommended that national sororities be accepted on campus. The request was granted, and on May 8, 1959 ten of the original twelve social clubs were chartered as chapters of national sororities. The Panhellenic Council was organized to oversee the activities of the chapters. The Intersorority Council is now the representative body governing sororities at Emory.

Scope and Content Note

This collection consists of records documenting the early social clubs and the transition from social clubs to chapters of national sororities. Information about individual chapters is limited primarily to clippings, invitations, etc. related to the May 1959 chartering celebration. Also contained in this collection is a certificate establishing a chapter of the professional education sorority, Kappa Delta Epsilon, which predates the founding of national social sororities on campus.

Arrangement Note

Arranged alphabetically by name of organization.
