Collection Description*Administrative History

Alfred E. Wilhelmi, educator and researcher in biochemistry, was educated at Western Reserve University (B.A.) and attended Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar (B.A. and Ph.D.). Wilhelmi came to Emory from the faculty of Yale University in 1950 as professor and chairman of the biochemistry department; was named Charles Howard Candler Professor of Biochemistry in 1960; received Emory's Thomas Jefferson award for service to the University and community in 1979; and retired from teaching in that same year.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of office files including personal and professional correspondence, reports, subject files, certificates, legal documents, writings, and teaching materials. The files reflect Wilhelmi's career as a teacher and researcher in biochemistry. Also documented are his particular research interests in endocrinology and the pituitary gland.

Arrangement Note

Unprocessed collection.

Finding Aid Note

Preliminary inventory available in the repository.
