Collection Description

Biographical Note

William Arthur Shelton was born on September 6, 1875 in Azusa, California. He received a bachelor of arts degree from Hargrove College in Ardmore, Oklahoma in 1904 as well as bachelor of divinity and master of arts degrees from Yale University in 1908. He was ordained in the Methodist Episcopal Church and subsequently served as President of Oklahoma Wesleyan College in Oklahoma City from 1911 until 1914.

In 1914, Shelton began to study with James Henry Breasted, Professor of Egyptology and Oriental History and Director of the Haskell Oriental Museum at the University of Chicago. The same year, Shelton was appointed Professor of Semitic Languages and Literature at Emory University in Atlanta, where he had also been awarded an honorary Doctor of Divinity. Shelton discontinued his studies at the University of Chicago within two years.

In 1919 and 1920, Shelton accompanied Breasted and three other men—Ludlow Bull, Daniel Luckenbill, and William Edgerton—on an expedition through Egyptian and former Ottoman territory then under British mandate. The expedition, called the American Scientific Mission, sailed from New York on the S.S. Duca D'Aosta on Christmas Eve of 1919. It passed through Egypt and eventually reached Mesopotamia via Bombay (Mumbai) in March 1920.

Shelton, Breasted, and the others were students of the Ancient Near East, and the expedition was devoted primarily to the exploration of ancient artwork and ruins throughout the so-called “Fertile Crescent” (a term coined by Breasted), and to the gathering of antiquities, especially in Egypt. Several of these items, including a full mummy purchased in Cairo, formed the initial foundation of the Emory Museum’s (now the Michael C. Carlos Museum) Egyptology collection. Shelton documented the American Scientific Mission in his memoir, Dust and Ashes of Empires, published in 1922.

The expedition's itinerary included the following cities and sites: Naples, Rome, Luxor, Aswan, Cairo, Port Said, Bombay (Mumbai), Basra, Ur Junction, Shatra, Naziriyah, Hillah, Baghdad, Mosul, Damascus, Jerusalem, London, and Paris. The expedition also visited numerous other places by ship, including several sites along the Euphrates River, in the Red Sea, the Persian Gulf, and through the Suez Canal.

After the American Scientific Mission, Shelton remained at Emory for nearly another decade, until he became the pastor of Mt. Vernon Place Methodist Church in Washington, DC, in 1930. Two years later he returned to Atlanta to lead Grace Methodist Church. Shelton became Superintendent of the Methodist Church’s Birmingham District in 1938. From 1949 to 1951 he was briefly Professor of Religion at Birmingham-Southern College. He died February 23, 1959.

Scope and Content Note

The papers of William Arthur Shelton primarily include materials related to his participation in the 1919 to 1920 American Scientific Mission led by James Henry Breasted of the University of Chicago, as well as some later documents cataloging his purchases for the Emory University

Museum. Shelton's diary, personal correspondence, notes on the budget and purchases, photographs, print ephemera, and numerous glass lantern slides document the expedition. This material consists primarily of reportage from the field. Shelton's primary correspondents include his wife, Ola, and their young children. Few of these materials are related to Shelton's later career and none to his earlier years, so while the collection spans the period 1919 to circa 1950, the bulk of materials originate from late 1919 and January to August 1920. Researchers should note that Series 2 includes Shelton's diary, chronicling the expedition from February 1920 forward, and that Series 3 includes fifty pages from a personal scrapbook in addition to many loose photographs.

Arrangement Note

Organized into 5 series: (1) Correspondence; (2) Ephemera and other papers; (3) Photographs; and (4) Glass lantern slides.
