Collection Description*Administrative History

The Teaching Aids Department provided faculty with sound and video recordings and other teaching aids for classroom instruction. The Department used recording equipment to create materials or acquired them through external sources, while maintaining a library of these recordings for internal use by students. The Department circulated equipment such as sound and video recorders and classroom projectors and produced items like photographic slides and transparencies on demand for use with projectors. Dr. Cox was regularly involved in recording campus events including convocation, faculty meetings, baccalaureate, commencement (graduation), as well as special events like lectures, alumni gatherings, retirement dinners, and musical performances.

Prior to formal establishment of the Teaching Aids Department, audiovisual educational services had been available at Emory University since the hiring of Dr. Albert Cox as the Teaching Aids Technician in 1947 and were coordinated through the Committee on Audio-visual and Other Teaching Aids. The Committee was chaired by Robert Rohrer until 1957. By 1959, the Committee had been renamed the Teaching Aids Department with Dr. Albert Cox as the Department head. The Teaching Aids Department moved to the basement of Candler Library in 1969 and continued to grow into the 1970s. However, by the summer of 1979, the Teaching Aids Department and its services were consolidated into the functions of the newly created Audiovisual Center in Candler Library. Dr. Albert Cox retired in July of 1979.

Scope and Content Note

The audiovisual materials of the Teaching Aids Department consists of audiotapes, audiocassettes, phonograph records, video recordings, and photographic slides collected and maintained by the Department for the purpose of supporting teaching and instruction at Emory University. Audiovisual materials are organized by format and include, when available, original identifying information derived from both labels on the items themselves and from a card catalog. Supporting materials within the collection include event programs and newspaper clippings of recorded campus events as well as a card catalog created by the Department for cataloging its holdings. The Teaching Aids Department provided de facto audiovisual services to the University and was responsible for recording campus events, including musical performances, lectures, and academic ceremonies, among others, which make up a bulk of the materials in this collection.

The recordings include recurring campus events like convocation, faculty meetings, baccalaureate, commencement (graduation), as well as special events like lectures, speeches, alumni gatherings, retirement dinners, and musical performances. Titles have been derived from item labels and from an internal card catalog system. Keywords taken from original labels have been added to the front of item descriptions for easier browsing in some cases, but note that some different keywords may describe similar events (ex. ## Series 2

Audiocassettes, 1948-1978

Boxes 22-27

Scope and Content Note

Series 2 contains sound recordings on audiocassettes produced or acquired by the Teaching Aids Department. Many audiocassettes were created from original audiotapes in Series 1. The recordings include recurring campus events like convocation, faculty meetings, baccalaureate, commencement (graduation), as well as special events like lectures, speeches, alumni gatherings, retirement dinners, and musical performances. Titles have been derived from item labels and from a card catalog system created by the Department. The beginning of some titles have had keywords attached for better viewing. Note that many audiocassettes contain two tracks, which may contain recordings that are unrelated to each other.

Arrangement Note

Arranged alphabetically by title.

Restrictions on Access

Special restrictions apply: Researchers must contact MARBL in advance to access audiovisual materials in this collection.
