Collection DescriptionAdministrative History

Emory University staff began recording campus events in the 1940s. Primarily responsible for these recordings was the Teaching Aids Department, which handled not only recordings but also acquiring audiovisual aids for in-class instruction. After 1979, recording campus events became the responsibility of no one office specifically and recordings were often made on an ad hoc basis. More recently, offices and departments responsible for communications and multimedia production began recording campus events and Emory-related content in local and national media.

Scope and Content Note

The Emory University audiovisual collection contains audio and video recordings collected from various sources, documenting events and occasions on campus from 1979 to 2002. This collection includes recordings of award, memorial, and dedication ceremonies; academic lectures and symposia; addresses by Emory presidents, including James T. Laney and William M. Chace; town hall meetings and other addresses by former United States President Jimmy Carter on various topics including human rights and international student exchange programs; general campus events and occasions; as well as media clippings of Emory-related news stories featured in local and national media, including coverage of alleged sexual and racial discrimination and the issue of same-sex marriage ceremonies on campus.

Arrangement Note

Organized into six series: (1) Emory Presidential speeches and addresses, (2) President Jimmy Carter speeches and lectures, (3) Memorial, dedication, and award ceremonies, (4) Lectures and symposia, (5) Miscellaneous campus events and recordings, and (6) Emory-related media clips.

Finding Aid Note
