Collection DescriptionBiographical Note

Lettie Pate Whitehead Evans (1872-1953), businesswoman and philanthropist, was born in Bedford, Virginia on February 21, 1872. She married Joseph Brown Whitehead, a lawyer practicing Chattanooga, Tennessee, in 1894. They had two sons, Joseph B. Whitehead, Jr. (1895-1935) and Conkey Pate Whitehead (1898-1940).

Joseph B. Whitehead, Sr. and a partner acquired the rights to bottle Coca-Cola across the United States from Asa Candler, the president of The Coca-Cola Company, in 1899. Before this agreement with Candler, the soft drink was only available at soda fountains. Four years later, Joseph, Lettie and their two sons moved to Atlanta, because one of the provisions of the deal required Whitehead to open a bottling plant in Coca-Cola's hometown. After working tirelessly to sell bottling franchises across the South, Joseph B. Whitehead, Sr. died unexpectedly in 1906.

Lettie Pate Whitehead oversaw the Whitehead Coca-Cola bottling interests after her husband's death. She served as chairman of the Whitehead Holding Company and president of the Whitehead Realty Company. In 1913 she married Arthur Kelly Evans, a retired officer in the Canadian Army. She became one of the first female directors of a large American corporation when she joined the board of The Coca-Cola Company in 1934.

In addition to her business interests, Evans was a generous philanthropist. She established the Lettie Pate Evans Foundation, Inc. in 1945. She gave significant gifts to Emory University, including establishing the Conkey Pate Whitehead Surgical Pavilion at Emory University Hospital, Agnes Scott College and Georgia Baptist Orphans Home.

She died in her home at Hot Springs, Virginia on November 14, 1953.

Subseries 4.1Whitehead Holding Company records, 1903-1973*Boxes 35 - 44; BV 1 - 9; OBV 1 - 2*Historical Note

The Whitehead Holding Company was incorporated in 1931 in Wilmington, Delaware. Lettie Pate Evans, Conkey Pate Whitehead and Joseph B. Whitehead, Jr. were the stockholders in the company. The company's holdings consisted of the stocks Evans and her sons held in The Coca-Cola Bottling Company, the parent bottling company started by Joseph B. Whitehead, Sr. and J.T. Lupton in 1900, as well as the shares of other bottling companies, including The Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Company, The Jackson [Georgia] Coca-Cola Bottling Company, The Newnan [Georgia] Bottling Company and The Coca-Cola Bottling Works in Dallas, Texas. While Evans and her two sons were alive, the company paid out approximately 90% of its net income to the company's three stockholders. In 1933 Robert W. Woodruff, the president of The Coca-Cola Company, arranged a deal to swap all of the holding company's stock in The Coca-Cola Bottling Company for common stock in The Coca-Cola Company. Two years later, in a similar deal, The Coca-Cola Company acquired the Whitehead Holding Company's stock in the Western Coca-Cola Bottling Company. The Whitehead Holding Company was liquidated in 1971, because of changes in the tax law. Its assets were transferred to the Joseph B. Whitehead Foundation, the Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation, Inc., and the Lettie Pate Evan Foundation, Inc.

The Whitehead Realty Company was incorporated in 1919. Lettie Pate Evans, Conkey Pate Whitehead, and Joseph B. Whitehead were the only shareholders in the company. The company bought and sold parcels of land in central business district of Atlanta and surrounding areas. In addition, the Whitehead Realty Company collected monthly rental fees for spaces in buildings it owned. For example, the company owned the Norris Building, which was located on Peachtree Street between Cain Street (Andrew Young International Boulevard) and Harris Street. The company changed the name of the building to the Whitehead Building in 1944. The company was liquidated in 1972, and its assets were transferred to the Joseph B. Whitehead Foundation, and the Lettie Pate Evans Foundation, Inc., and the Lettie Pate Whitehead Foundation, Inc.
