Collection Description

Scope and Content Note

This artificial collection is comprised of small manuscript collections either written in Georgia, or by, to, about, or concerning Georgians or Georgia and includes correspondence, photographs, account books, and printed material. Material in the collection documents art and literature, agriculture, business, education, politics, and social customs throughout Georgia from 1812-1967. Of particular note are numerous documents relating to the sale of enslaved people and the economic relationships between land-owners and freed Blacks in the post-Civil War period. Also present are muster rolls and other documents relating to state military units before the Civil War; financial records and correspondence documenting a variety of businesses in the state; records of the state government and political groups; and small collections of personal papers.

Arrangement Note

Arranged in alphabetical order.

- 1 41 Ficklin, W. H., Jr. Diary of W. H. Ficklin, Jr., Atlanta, Georgia, with entries between August 13, 1887-March 24, 1888, approximately 177 pages. Ficklin came to Atlanta from Prattsburg, Georgia, to accept employment with Thomas M. Clark & Co. His first room was at 22 Wheat St. He attended the Methodist Church. He was ambitious to succeed in business and to improve his moral condition. He apparently worked in building supplies and may have been a contractor himself. A piece of company letterhead laid in the diary shows him

- as Tennessee branch manager of the (Nashville, Tennessee, n.d.) Milwaukee Grain Dryer Company. On January 6, 1921, he makes a final entry in his "dear old diary," in which he says he feels like the "man without a country/no home but simply staying." The balance of the volume is used for business accounts. On pp. 171-173, Ficklin comments on the Piedmont Chatauqua, which he refers to as "Atlanta's White Elephant or Henry Grady's 'What is it.'" 1 item
- OP4 2 Franklin College, Athens, Georgia, image and article from Gleason's Pictorial Drawing Room Companion, 1854
- 1 42 Freeman, James Crawford. ALS from James Crawford Freeman, a Republican Congressman, to Col. J. C. W. Mills, December 21, 1874. Mr. Freeman replies to requests made to him for patronage and appointments by saying, ". . . in the first place I would not advise you to incur much expense in a contest . . . in the next place I cannot advise any war, being made upon, and the displacement of any Republican now holding office in Atlanta. . . . This everlasting war, made upon Republican office holders, by Republicans, has well nigh ruined the party in Fulton Co., and I mite say throughout the State." 1 item
- OP4 4 Gardner, James, editor of the Tri-Weekly Constitutionalist, image found in issue dated May 3, 1849
- 4 3 General Motors Doraville Assembly Plant, brochure and booklets, 1947-1997. The brochure and one booklet document the opening of the plant in 1947; the second booklet was produced in commemoration of the plant's 50th anniversary in 1997.
- 1 43 Georgia Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, letter to the General Assembly, July 1, 1915
- BV2 George, Thomas Benton. Personal account book of Thomas Benton George, 1866-1927, with entries covering the years 1886-1917. Mr. George was born March 29, 1866, near Owensburg, Indiana. He was the son of Joseph F. George, a farmer and minister, and Amanda Sleet George, a Kentuckian. Thomas George taught school for several years, then entered the piano and organ business, in which he continued for most of the rest of his life. He married Nettie Henry of Indian Springs, IN, on July 27, 1889; they had four children, only one of whom, the donor, was still living (age 71) in 1963. The book is a detailed daily record of every expenditure and source of income. George lived in various towns in Indiana and Kentucky until 1902, when he moved south. He lived in Atlanta, Georgia from 1902-1905; relocated to Birmingham, AL, 1905-1907; then returned to Atlanta, where he remained, dying there on January 17, 1927. He was a devoted member of the Christian church. 1 item

- 5 5 Greeting cards
- 1 57 Gresham, E.B. and John J. Photocopies of five ALS: one by E. B. Gresham to "Brother," and four by John J. Gresham. In the first letter, written February 22, 1837 in Columbus [?], E. B. Gresham describes a trip to Charleston by rail, his stay there, and the trip home on a steamer via Savannah and Augusta. All of John J. Gresham's letters are written from Macon, Georgia. On July 7, 1846, John tells of the death of his son and father and reveals some religious sentiment. He writes on March 8, 1862, of financing the "Gresham Rifles," of food and crops, and expresses a guarded optimism about the outcome of the war. This optimism is gone by July 21, 1864, when he predicts the consequences if Atlanta falls, and also tells of slave losses, militia, and soldiers in the Macon area. On February 24, 1871, he writes of a trip to New Orleans

- and Texas (Galveston, Houston and the Brazos area) and describes the land and the population (largely white) that is settling there. 5 items and 5 transcriptions

The register includes the names of approximately 1000 military veterans and their families from the 23rd and 24th Battalions and the 14th Regiment who presumably served in Revolutionary War or the Creek War of 1813-1814. The Native lands in the lottery comprised the southern third of present-day Georgia and included lands ceded to the government following the defeat of the Creek tribe in the Creek War, and Cherokee lands later surrendered to the government. There are additional loose pages included with the bound ledger whose provenance is unknown and which may or may not be related to the ledger.
