Collection Description

Historical Note

Months of student unrest in Paris universities culminated in a confrontation between students and police at the Sorbonne on May 3, 1968. The students and their supporters barricaded the Latin Quarter and were immediately besieged by the police. The conflict spread to provincial universities and by mid May workers began to strike to demonstrate their support of the students. By May 20, 1968 public services had come to a halt and transportation ceased. Radical groups proliferated in the Latin Quarter, advocating a program of common action between students and workers. On May 30, 1968 Premier De Gaulle addressed the nation, stating that France must choose between his government or chaos. The strike ended, and elections were held in June. De Gaulle's party, L'Union des Démocrates pour la République (U.D.R.) emerged victorious. Workers were appeased by wage increases and students were placated by promises of drastic university reforms. During the elections of 1974-1979 the Socialist party, which had been greatly weakened by the events of May-June 1968, began to challenge De Gaulle's U.D.R. In September 1977, the Socialist-Communist coalition split, and center-right parties swept the parliamentary elections of 1978.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of material collected by Dorothy Kraus relating to French politics from 1962-1981. The materials include pamphlets, newspaper and magazine articles, and posters printed by various organizations documenting the student and union workers General Strike of 1968 including Charles de Gaulle's role in settling the strike; the French national election of 1974 between François Mitterrand and François Giscard d'Estaing, and de Gaulle; the Paris municipal election of 1977, and the European Economic Community election of 1979. Organizations represented in the collection include the Parti communiste français, Parti socialiste (France), Union des démocrates pour la République, Rassemblement pour la République, CGT-FO (Union), Confédération française démocratique du travail, and the Union nationale des étudiants de France.

Arrangement Note

Arranged by record type.
