Collection Description

Biographical Note

Dr. John R. Little (October, 1832-August 17, 1902) was born near Union, South Carolina. At the beginning of the Civil War, Little enlisted in Jenkins' Brigade and served four years, at first as a private soldier, but on July 3, 1862 was given a position in the Winder Hospital, Richmond; on January 5, 1863 was examined by the Army Medical Examining Board and on January 7 received orders to report to Jackson, Mississippi. He spent the remainder of the war as a hospital surgeon. While at home on a 30 day leave, he was married on December 5, 1863 to Miss Sarah Montgomery. After serving four years in the Confederate Army he returned to his home and practiced medicine. Around 1872 he entered the drug business in Spartanburg, South Carolina, where he died 30 years later.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of a microfilm copy of the diary (85 pages) of Dr. John R. Little from 1861-1863. The diary was compiled between April 13, 1861 and December 19, 1863; it records his service in the Confederate Army as a soldier and as a surgeon. Following the diary is a parole certificate issued to Dr. Little, May 10, 1864 in Meridian, Mississippi.
