Collection Description*Biographical Note

Christopher Logue was born in Portsmouth, England, on November 23, 1926, to John Dominic and Molly Logue. Logue attended two Catholic schools and then Portsmouth Grammar School. He volunteered for the Army in 1943, serving first with the Army Commandos in St. Ives, Cornwall, and then with the Royal Highland Regiment (Black Watch) from 1944-1948 in the Middle East. While in Binyamina, Palestine, Logue was charged with illegal possession of six Army Books 64 (identity documents and/or pay books issued to other ranks), and subsequently imprisoned for two years.

Logue brought W.H. Auden's Selected Poems, the complete Shakespeare, and a selection of Wilde into prison. Following his release, he began his attempts to become a poet. Logue immersed himself in the work of Ezra Pound and entered London's literary circle. Eventually growing dispirited with London, Logue left for Paris in 1951, and remained for five years. During this period he published work in Merlin, and received encouragement from Samuel Beckett, a fellow Merlin contributor. Logue's Leftist political leanings formed in Paris, and led Logue to Berlin to see Bertolt Brecht, the "only writer," in his estimation, "who could use political things without strain." Brecht advised Logue to return to London, learn German, and return for an apprenticeship; Brecht's death a few months later left Logue in London to stay. When he returned to London in 1956, Logue re-entered the cultural and political scene, raising political consciousness through his "poster poems" and developing works in "jazzetry" (collaborations of poetry and jazz).

Logue began writing plays at this time, with The Trial of Cob and Leach (1959) and Antigone (1960), the latter a work that would belie Logue's talent with free adaptation and rewriting of classic works. With the translations and support of Donald Carne-Ross, Logue began his Iliad series, publishing Patrocleia in 1962. Logue would continue to translate books of the Iliad with early help from the Bollingen Foundation and revise his work for the next forty years, publishing individual books and then grouping them under the name War Music. Throughout the 1960s, Logue alternated his ongoing classical work with light comic productions, acting roles, a satirical column in Private Eye, and lyric poetry. Logue increased his variety of work in the 1970s with children's books, screenplays, stage plays, and the production of War Music as a "music drama." He moved from radio production to television with his Edible Gold series, a selection of poems to be read sporadically on BBC channels, and further brought his work into the public sphere with song-writing, newspaper publications, and frequent poetry readings. Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of the personal and literary papers of Christopher Logue from around 1945 to 2001. The papers include correspondence, literary notebooks, literary manuscripts, and collected printed material. The papers include typescripts of many published works and selections from projects Logue edited. Of particular note are extensive manuscripts and background materials for Logue's War Music collections, and publishing correspondence for some of his major works. The collection includes early journals and notebooks, musical arrangements, and unpublished poetry and screenplays.

Arrangement Note

Organized into five series: (1) Correspondence, (2) Works by Logue, (3) Works by others, (4) Printed material, and (5) Other papers.

Correspondence, 1945-1993
Boxes 1 - 4

Scope and Content Note

The correspondence series includes letters Christopher Logue received between 1945 and 1993, as well as copies of letters Logue sent between 1959 and 1993. The most significant correspondence is between Logue and his publishers related to various projects in poetry, music, and screenwriting. The War Music correspondence includes Bergholz Literary Services, the Bollingen Foundation, Stephen Spender, and D.S. Carne-Ross. Other significant correspondents include Sir John Paul Getty Jr., Michael Horovitz, and Ken Russell.

Arrangement Note

Personal correspondence is arranged in chronological order and publishers correspondence is arranged in alphabetical order.

Series 2
Works by Logue, circa 1952-2001
Boxes 5 - 21; OP 1 and 2

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of writings by Logue from 1952-2001, and includes journals, notebooks, collected and uncollected poetry, edited works, published and unpublished drama, musical works, and prose. The series begins with Logue's personal journals of diary-writing and memoranda, then continues with notebooks containing draft material of unpublished work as well as pieces from collected works; notebooks designated for particular volumes are included with those volumes.

Logue's collected poems are arranged chronologically by date of publication, and include outlines, manuscript and/or typescript versions of the poems with significant number of drafts and hand-written revisions, and clean copies of the final version. Uncollected poems are arranged alphabetically by title or first line, when a title is lacking; included with the uncollected poems are numerous drafts for a work Logue dubbed "unfinished longish poem." Logue's published dramatic works and screenplays similarly are arranged chronologically by publication date, and the unpublished works alphabetically by title. The series ends with published musical works and uncollected prose writings.

Arrangement Note

Arranged by type of record: journals and notebooks, collected poetry, edited works, uncollected poetry, published drama, unpublished drama, published musical work, and prose.

Scope and Content Note

The published materials in this series include works by Logue, works about Logue, and works by others which Logue collected. Early publications of Logue's poems are collected in magazines, clippings, and posters, and reviews written by Logue are present as clippings. Works about Logue contains programs advertising reading engagements, interviews, and reviews of his work. The "other" category collects items Logue preserved, such as the 1960s radical newspaper "Black Dwarf" and programs for reading events Logue attended. This series also contains two oversized papers, posters of "June Release" and "Know Thy Enemy."
