Collection DescriptionBiographical Note

Kelly Miller (1863-1939), an African American intellectual and professor, was born in South Carolina in 1863, just a few months after the Emancipation Proclamation freed slaves in the South. As a child Miller expressed a penchant for mathematics, and he was sent for special education in a Presbyterian-sponsored school. After secondary school, he received a scholarship to study at Howard University. He graduated from Howard in 1886 and became the first African American student to enroll at John Hopkins University in Baltimore. There he studied mathematics, physics, and astronomy. Although unable to complete his education due to financial constraints, he taught mathematics in high school and eventually became a professor of mathematics at Howard University.

Miller was an educator and administrator, a commentator on race in America, and a widely published journalist. He is recognized as a prolific African American pamphleteer, producing dozens of essays published by him or by other African American publishers. He edited Kelly Miller's Monographic Magazine, and he wrote a half dozen books.

Miller served Howard University in multiple capacities from 1890-1934, teaching both mathematics and sociology. He was dean of the College of Arts and Sciences for more than a dozen years, during a period of dramatic expansion of the University. He married Annie Mae Miller (1869-1950) of Baltimore, Maryland in 1894, and they had five children: Kelly Miller, Jr. (a graduate of Howard University medical school), Isaac Newton Miller, Paul Butler Miller, May Miller, and Irene Miller. Kelly Miller died December 29, 1939.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of the papers of Kelly Miller from 1890-1989. The papers contain correspondence, writings, subject files, printed material, photographs and other papers, and the papers of his wife Annie Mae Miller. The correspondence includes incoming and outgoing letters regarding article submissions to and from African American and non-African American mainstream press outlets. The correspondence also includes communications from his tenure as professor of Mathematics and Sociology and as Dean of the Junior College at Howard University. Correspondence from civic groups to which he belonged and personal correspondence from family and acquaintances is also included.

The writings by Miller include manuscript and typescript copies of article drafts, outlines, poetry, speeches, and the "Oath of Afro-American Youth" dating from 1916-1939. Topics of the writings include constitutional law, analysis of the 14th, 15th, and 18th amendments, prohibition, lynching and mob violence, the New Deal, presidential policy analysis, African-Americans and communism, race relations, the Republican Party, African American colleges and universities, and Howard University. Writings by others consist of articles, speeches, and one radio transcript. Writings by others discuss college life and curricula, primary and secondary education, race and education, and the New Deal. The radio transcript discusses James Bland, an African American musician on whom Kelly Miller did research.

The subject files consist of records from institutions and associations to which Miller belonged and include reports, reviews, and meeting minutes from the Harriet Tubman Aid to the Blind and the Hampton-Tuskegee Endowment Fund among other civic organizations. The subject files also contain records kept by Miller during his tenure as dean at Howard University. These records include meeting minutes and reports from the Board of Trustees, faculty meetings, the committee on salaries, the alumni association, among others between 1922 and 1935. Topical folders consist of material related to James Bland, Mexican immigration, and blacks in medicine.

The printed material series is divided into printed material about Miller, printed material by Miller, and general printed material which he collected. In addition, a set of scrapbooks contains articles by and about Miller. The printed material about Miller includes programs of events, leaflets promoting his published writings, articles analyzing or responding to positions taken by Miller, and material memorializing Miller. Printed material by Miller includes published articles in journals and newspapers including copies of his syndicated column "Kelly Miller Says" published in African American newspapers. General printed material consists of items collected by Miller and includes articles, meeting fliers, church bulletins, and commencement programs from African American schools and universities.

Photographs and other papers consist of material from circa 1880 to 1939. Photographs of Miller include portraits and candid shots of Miller, individuals, and a photo album of Miller with alumni and family. Article price lists, article submission lists, incomplete biographical papers, ephemera, financial records, mailing lists, newspaper lists, and notes are also found here. The collection also includes material relating to Kelly Miller's wife and children including personal correspondence, financial records, newspaper clippings, and photographs.

Arrangement Note

Boxes 1 - 15

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of correspondence to and from Kelly Miller from 1894 to 1939. Correspondents include various newspaper editors and publishers, and organizations including Howard University, the National Urban League, and the National Association of Colored People. Much of the correspondence is related to his capacity as dean of the Junior College and concerns faculty appointments, faculty salaries, fundraising efforts, and general administrative duties. The series also includes letters related to the establishment of a National Negro Library and Museum and open letters to Howard University presidents criticizing alleged communist organizing on campus and other issues. Personal correspondence between Miller and his wife Annie Mae Miller are in the folder dated 1894-1899. All correspondence directed to or from Kelly Miller originally located in the Annie Mae Miller papers are located in Series 1: Correspondence. The section "To others" contains correspondence not directed to or from Kelly Miller, but which were present in the collection.

Writings, 1916-1939
Boxes 16 - 23; BV 1

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of manuscript and typescript copies of writings by Kelly Miller and writings by others from 1916-1939. Kelly Miller's writings include articles for periodicals including letters to the editor, open letters to public officials including President Woodrow Wilson, and open letters to presidents of Howard University. Writings also include poems, book reviews, speeches, and a manuscript draft of a collection of unpublished and previously published essays entitled "Is the Color Line Crumbling?" Writings chronicle Miller's perception and coverage of national and global affairs including analysis of presidential policies and administrations (1917-1939), the New Deal, constitutional law and interpretation, political parties, race and politics, Jim Crow, lynching, the Garvey Movement, African American voting patterns, African American migration, African Americans in Higher Education, Christianity in the United States, and prohibition. Analysis of international issues includes discussion of the role of the United States in the League of Nations, American imperialism, racism in Europe and the Americas, and the Sino-Japanese War. Writings by others consist of articles, speeches, and one radio transcript, and address such topics as college life and curricula, primary and secondary education, race and education, and the New Deal. The radio transcript concerns James Bland, an African American musician who was the subject of a research article by Miller. Published writings by Miller are located in Series 4: Printed Material.

Arrangement Note

Organized into two subseries: (2.1) Writings by Miller and (2.2.) Writings by Others. Titled and dated typescripts located in the writings series are ordered chronologically. Untitled and undated writings and incomplete drafts are arranged alphabetically.

Series 3
Subject files, 1910-1940
Boxes 24 - 27; BV 2; OP1

Scope and Content Note

The series includes organizational reports, meeting minutes, newsletters, and files of topical interest kept by Miller from 1910 to 1940. Records are from institutions and associations including Howard University, the National Negro Congress, National Conference of Negro Women, and the Phyllis Wheatley Young Women's Christian Associations. Other records of national and local civic associations with whom he had affiliation are included. Howard University papers, kept during Miller's time as professor and dean, consist of records related to the Alumni Association (1932-1932), Board of Trustees (1910-1934), faculty appointments (1925-1926), faculty committee (1925-1926) faculty meeting minutes (1921-1925), press releases (1920-1935), special committee on the National Negro Library and Museum (1938), and curriculum. Topical folders consist of material related to James Bland, Mexican immigration, and blacks in medicine.
