Collection Description

Biographical Note

Reverend Thomas Porter (d. 1821) married Mary Gibbs in 1798 in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and the couple had three children: William G. Porter (1799-1877), Mary Porter (1801-1874), and Richard G. Porter (1809-1867). William married Catharine Benezet, sister of Samuel Benezet (1821-1877), and had a son, William G. Porter, Jr. (1840-1884). After his wedding, he moved from Apalachicola, Florida, to Pennsylvania, settling in Philadelphia. Richard married Mary Tibbits Salter (1824-1902) and had seven children: Richard Henry Porter, Edward Gibbs Porter, Elizabeth Pepperrell Porter, Gilbert Rodman Porter, William Salter Porter, and Richard Gibbs Porter, Jr.

In 1829, William G. Porter, along with Charles and Joseph Lawton of the firm J & C Lawton, collaborated to found William G. Porter and Company, a shipping and merchandise company. The partnership dictated that the Lawtons would supply merchandise that Porter would ship and sell on their behalf. William's brother, Richard, joined the company in 1834 after working in the area with another merchandising company headed by a Major Hardin. William included other family members in business matters. In addition to his brother, William employed his cousins, James Ruan and John Ruan (1798-1868), and his brother-in-law, Samuel Benezet. John Ruan arranged for the initial wharf and storage space in the Apalachicola Harbor, where their consignment shipping began in 1831. William G. Porter and Company worked with a number of prominent shipping companies, including Gray and Morse out of Boston, Massachusetts, and Eagle and Hazzard as well as John H. Talman out of New York, New York. They also worked with distributors in Liverpool, England, such as John Kearley and Son and John Miller and Company, as well as the Castello Brothers of Havana, Cuba. William was even appointed Vice Consul to Belgium by that country's king in 1840. In addition to destinations in the northeast and overseas, the company regularly supplied merchandise to customers along the Apalachicola River and acted as a consignment shipper for cotton farmers in Georgia and Alabama. The company also invested in their own ships, including the America and the Chipola James Grierson.

Because William G. Porter and Company was highly diversified, it weathered economic slowdowns that drove other companies out of business. The company supported itself by serving as cotton factors (or commission merchants), acting as bank and collections agents, and managing three general merchandise stores in Apalachicola, Florida, St. Josephs, Florida; and Columbus, Georgia. From 1835-1844, James Ruan managed the Apalachicola store. In 1844, Samuel Benezet took over the bookkeeping and bank agent work when James left to begin working at the store in St. Joseph, Florida (now Port St. Joe, Florida).

Their role as bank agents, which was common for areas like Apalachicola, where there was no local bank, added to their revenue, especially during the economic instability of the bank panic of 1837. As bank agents, William G. Porter and Company gained a strong position in cotton factoring. As cotton factor for many cotton planters in Alabama and Georgia, William G. Porter and Company had prime real estate on the Apalachicola River, which was the main shipping route for cotton before the U.S. Civil War. In the 1850s, the company witnessed increased cotton consumption in England following the Crimean War (1855), which led to an expansion of the company's cotton exporting, but was followed by a crash in cotton sales by the end of the 1850s. In 1850, Benezet handed the bookkeeping of the Apalachicola store to his brother, John, and left Florida due to his failing health.

William G. Porter and Company continued to operate during the U. S. Civil War, but due primarily to blockades of Confederate ports, the amount of business conducted was limited in comparison to the booming shipments from before the war. After the war, William retired from the business, and in 1867, the company was renamed R. G. Porter and Company and directed by Richard Porter, Samuel Benezet, and John Ruan. Richard died two months after this change and John Ruan died a year later.

Due to the company's acquisitions, the family still retained a number of properties in Apalachicola. After Samuel Benezet retired to North Carolina, Richard Porter's son, Richard Henry "Harry" Porter, took control of the store and collections of rent on the properties of the company. In 1877, William G. Porter, Jr. settled the firm's final investments and closed the company.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of the papers of the William G. Porter family from 1821-1936, as well as the business records of William G. Porter and Company from 1831-1867. The family papers primarily include correspondence but also contain financial records, legal documents, personal papers, professional papers, and photographs of the Porter family. The business records include accounting, legal, and insurance records, as well as bills of lading, freight lists, weighers returns, and correspondence regarding their shipping business and work as bank and collection agents.

The majority of the family papers are correspondence between members of the Porter family on domestic matters, daily events, and family news, but there are also letters between Richard G. Porter, William G. Porter, and John Ruan in which they conduct business relating to William G. Porter and Company. Also included in family papers are records of the family's investments, including receipts and invoices for personal purchases and medical bills, and as property and income taxes. There are documents settling the estate of Richard G. Porter as well as legal records that include estate divisions, contracts, and disputes involving members of the family. Personal papers include devotionals, drawings, historical writings, a series of hunting journals, and photographs of three generations of Porter family members. Professional papers consist primarily of materials relating to William Porter's position as Vice Consul to Belgium, documents on the founding of William G. Porter and Company, and commissioner papers for William Porter and Richard G. Porter.

The business records of William G. Porter and Company contain accounting, legal, and insurance records, as well as shipping records such as bills of lading, ship manifests and freight lists, and weighers returns. There is also a large amount of correspondence from trading partners, both national and international, about merchandise including cotton, rum, tobacco, and other general commodities the company shipped. Other letters pertain to the company's work as bank and collections agents. Accounting records include ledgers, account statements, sales records, bills, and invoices that chronicle merchandise sales and shipping. Bills of lading document the type, quantity, and destination of freight. Legal records include powers of attorney, charter parties, and ships protests, while ships manifests, freight lists, and weighers returns document the company's role in shipping and cotton factoring.

Series 1
Family papers, 1823-1936
Boxes 1-8, OP1, BV 1-2

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of the papers of the Porter family from 1821-1936 including correspondence, financial records, legal documents, personal papers, professional papers, and photographs. The majority of this series is correspondence (1823-1936) between members of the Porter family and pertains to domestic matters, daily events, and family news. Much of the correspondence is between relatives living away from Apalachicola, Florida, including numerous letters sent by William G. Porter to his sisters during his time in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Other topics covered in the letters include the Southwark riots (1844); the Mexican-American War (1846); slave labor, both within the home and in the William G. Porter and Company; and the bank panic of 1837. Also included in family correspondence are letters between Richard G. Porter, William G. Porter, and John Ruan regarding the family business, William G. Porter and Company. Photocopies and transcriptions of most of these letters are available to researchers.

Financial records (1868-1912) consist of Porter family investments, receipts and invoices for personal purchases and medical bills, and property and income taxes. Financial records also include documents regarding the estate of Richard G. Porter. Legal documents (1821-1867) pertain mainly to events in Franklin County, Florida, some involving Samuel Benezet in his role as notary public while others, including estate divisions, contracts, and a number of financial disputes and settlements, directly involve other members of the family. There is also a slave deed from 1846 in which William G. Porter was a party as well as Dr. John Ruan's citizenship papers. Transcripts of many of the letters, created by the donor, are included.

Personal papers (1849-1907) include materials produced or collected by the Porter family, including devotionals, drawings, historical writings, and a report card. Of particular interest is a series of hunting journals that documents wildlife and hunting practices of Northern Florida from 1868-1907. Photographs (circa 1870-1920) include carte de visites and cabinet cards of at least three generations of Porter family members, as well as a cabinet card of the Apalachicola Band from 1897. Professional papers (1831-1907) include commissioner papers for William Porter and Richard G. Porter; materials relating to William Porter's position as Vice Consul to Belgium; and founding records of William G. Porter and Company including a letter, written on July 27, 1831, in which William Porter confirms details on the founding contract with Charles and Joseph Lawton of the firm J & C Lawton.

Series 2
Business records, 1831-1867
Boxes 9-183, OP 2-23, BV 3-10

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of the records of William G. Porter and Company, a merchandise and shipping company operating out of Apalachicola, Florida, from 1831-1867. The series contains accounting records, bills of lading, insurance records, legal records, correspondence, ships manifests and freight lists, and weighers returns. Accounting records document the financial transactions of the company and include ledgers, account records, sales records, bills, and invoices. These materials document sales and shipping from Georgia and Alabama to Apalachicola, Florida, and shipping to foreign destinations such as Liverpool, England, and Havana, Cuba, through hubs in Boston, Massachusetts, and New York, New York. A substantial part of the series consists of bills of lading, which are contracts between William G. Porter and Company and the owners of ships detailing the type, quantity, and destination of goods shipped through consignment. Legal records include powers of attorney given by banks and insurance companies for which William G. Porter and Company worked; charter parties, which are contracts between the company and the ships they used; and ships protests that detail loss sustained during a voyage. Correspondence is comprised of letters regarding shipping, both nationally and internationally, as well as the company's work with banks as agents and in collections. The series also contains ships manifests and freight lists; weighers returns, which are notes from cotton weighers and measurers to determine pricing; and insurance records that consist primarily of policies.

Arrangement Note

Organized into seven subseries: (2.1) Accounting records, (2.2) bills of lading, (2.3) Insurance records, (2.4) Legal records, (2.5) Correspondence, (2.6) Ship manifests and freight lists, and (2.7) Weighers returns.

Subseries 2.1
Accounting records, 1831-1867
Boxes 9-51, OP1-OP2, 19, BV 3-10

Scope and Content Note

The subseries consists of accounting records of William G. Porter and Company from 1831-1867. These records include account statements relating to local accounts, foreign accounts, and cotton sales. There are sales records and receipts, both for general merchandise and for cotton sales, which became the primary shipping commodity for the company in the 1850s. There are also account statements on sales within Apalachicola and on foreign companies. Bills and invoices document the company's general expenses, expenses incurred by members of the company during travel, and shipping costs such as those incurred by wharf, storage, freight, and lighterage (the transporting of materials between ships by way of a smaller vessel). Records of items sent to and from people and companies throughout Georgia, Florida, and Alabama along with the account records of these transactions were noted by the company as town bills. Accounting records also include bills of exchange (notes that are similar to checks but allow the payment to be easily transferred) and sales ledgers from the company. Records show that personal relationships were formed between members of each company as evidenced by a document on cotton sales, dated June 24, 1867, that notes the death of Richard G. Porter.

Subseries 2.2
Bills of lading, 1831-1867
Boxes 52-83, OP1

Scope and Content Note

The subseries consists of bills of lading held by William G. Porter and Company from 1831-1867. Bills of lading are contracts between William G. Porter and Company and the owners of ships detailing the type, quantity, and destination of materials being transported. Because the company worked in consignment shipping, the bills of lading are the receipt of shipment documenting the company's shipping work, and show that by 1860, the company was shipping primarily cotton from planters in Alabama and Georgia. Materials shipped by the Apalachicola River, usually by steamship, are labeled as bills of lading by river and those sent by sea to New York, New York; Boston, Massachusetts; or foreign destinations, usually by schooner, brig, or bark, are labeled as bills of lading by sea. Steamships include Agnes, Apalachicola, Laura, South Carolina, Oswechee, Benjamin Franklin, and The Wave. Also employed were the schooners Patrick Henry, Columbia, Creole, and Monterey and the brigs General Wilson, Georgiana, and Laura Jones.

Subseries 2.4
Legal records, 1831-1867
Boxes 86-87, OP1-OP3

Scope and Content Note

The subseries consists of legal records from William G. Porter and Company from 1831-1867. These records include powers of attorney, charter parties, and ships protests. Powers of attorney include those that were afforded by banks as part of the company's position as bank agent and collection agent, as well as instances where the company acted on behalf of insurance companies in settling claims. In several cases, William G. Porter and Company acted on behalf of outside participants in the sales and purchases of commodities such as ships and cattle. Other legal records include charter parties, a contract in which a ship is hired for the shipping of goods, and ships protests, legal documents that protect the ship's owner from liability after a ship has suffered loss caused by storm or wreckage. Also included are bonds of general average, which are contracts detailing the shared loss in case of damage to a ship or cargo in transport.

Subseries 2.5

Correspondence, 1831-1866

Boxes 88-180

Scope and Content Note

The subseries consists of correspondence to and from William G. Porter and Company from 1831-1866. The letters include bank letters, foreign letters, letters from the interior, letters pertaining to collections, and letterbooks. Bank letters include letters from the Bank of Brunswick in Augusta, Georgia, concerning the company's work as bank agent, as well as letters from other banks regarding William G. Porter and Company's work as collection agent. Foreign letters include those written from or dealing with shipping and merchandise from outside the United States, including the shipping of cotton to Liverpool, England, or rum and sugar from Havana, Cuba. Letters from the interior primarily cover shipping between William G. Porter and Company in Apalachicola and cotton planters in Georgia and Alabama, as well as dealers in Boston, Massachusetts, and New York, New York. There are also letters from shipping partners from the interior asking for specific, personal items, illustrating relationships between the company and patrons. Some of these letters include December 1849 letters requesting a wagon for a grandson or demanding refunds on rancid beans. These letters also cover topics such as the Mexican-American War (1846-1848) and the Great Fire of New York (1835). Letterbooks, bound copies of letters sent by the William G. Porter and Company, are also included.
