Collection Description

Biographical Note

Arthur Gray Powell, lawyer, judge, and author, was born September 2, 1873, in Blakely, Georgia. His parents were Richard Holmes (1841-1899), attorney, and Keturah Perry Powell.

Emory Libraries provides copies of its finding aids for use only in research and private study. Copies supplied may not be copied for others or otherwise distributed without prior consent of the holding repository.

Powell attended Mercer University in Macon (1889-1990), but did not graduate from there. He left Mercer to study law (1891) and received his law license (October 8, 1891). His father was already practicing law in Blakely, and Powell joined him forming a partnership known as R.H. Powell and Son. Two years after receiving his law license, Powell was admitted to the Bar of the Supreme Court (1893). Six years after his father's death, Powell formed a new partnership in Blakely with Robert Pottle under the name of Powell and Pottle (1905-1907).

In 1907, he became a judge for the Court of Appeals for Georgia (1907-1912) and moved to Atlanta (1906). He was a member of the Atlanta law firm Little, Powell, Reid, and Goldstein which later became Powell, Goldstein, Frazier, and Murphy. Arthur Gray Powell was a member of the American Bar Association, American Law Institute, American Judicature Society, Georgia Bar Association, and Atlanta Bar Association. He served as an officer in most of these organizations at some point in his career. Powell married Annie Wilkin (December 31, 1896), whom he had known since his teen-age years. The Powells had four children, one of which died in infancy. Powell died August 5, 1951. He is buried at Westview Cemetery in Atlanta.

Biographical Source: I Can Go Home Again by Arthur G. Powell, Who Was Who Vol. III, and Powell's obituary from the August 6th and 7th issues of The Atlanta Journal (1951).

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of the papers of Arthur Gray Powell from 1933-1951. The papers include correspondence, notes, clippings, articles, manuscripts, and photographs.
