Biographical Note

Liam Rector (1949-2007), American poet and educator, was born Ronald Edward Rector in Washington, D.C., on November 21, 1949. He attended several colleges, but never received an undergraduate degree. He did, however, earn a master's degree from the Writing Seminars at Johns Hopkins University and an MPA from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard. He was the director of the Writing Seminars at Bennington College in Bennington, Vermont, and taught at Columbia University and Emerson College, among others. He also administered literary programs for the Association of Writers and Writing Programs, the Folger Shakespeare Library, the National Endowment for the Arts, and the Academy of American Poets.

Rector was the author of three volumes of poetry: The Sorrow of Architecture (1984), American Prodigal (1994), and The Executive Director of the Fallen World (2006). At the time of his death, he was married to poet Tree Swenson and had one daughter from a previous marriage. Facing failing health, Rector committed suicide in his New York City apartment on August 15, 2007.
