Collection Description

Biographical Note

Richard H. Rich (December 24, 1901-May 1, 1975), merchant and business executive, was born in Atlanta, Georgia, the son of Herman and Rosalind Rich Rosenheim. His father was a shoe manufacturer in Savannah, his mother the daughter of Morris Rich, founder of Rich's department stores in Atlanta. Richard Rich legally changed his name from Rosenheim to Rich in 1920 at the urging of his grandfather. On December 29, 1930, he married Virginia Lazarus of New Orleans, Louisiana. They had three children, Sally Rich Rose Adolph, Virginia Rich Barnett, and Michael Peter Rich. Mrs. Rich died in 1957.

Rich spent his youth in Savannah attending local schools. He graduated from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania in 1923 with a Bachelor of Science degree in economics. His formal schooling ended with post-graduate studies at Harvard University in 1923-1924.

After spending a year at L. Bamberger and Company's store in Newark, New Jersey, Rich joined M. Rich and Bros. as a full-time employee in 1924. While a teenager, he had lived with his grandparents in summer months and worked as a bundle-wrapper and stock boy at Rich's. From 1924 to 1933, he worked in the business office and merchandising departments. In 1924, he was elected a member of the Board of Directors of M. Rich and Brothers' real estate holding company and, in 1929, the year the company changed its name from M. Rich and Bros. to Rich's, Inc., he became a Rich's director. From 1933 to 1936, Rich headed the store's buying operation in New York City, then returned to Atlanta to be General Sales Manager and Publicity Director. He continued his rise through management ranks, being elected company vice-president in 1937, treasurer in 1947, and president in 1949. Twelve years later, he became Chairman of the Board, a position he held until 1972 when he entered semi-retirement as Chairman of the Executive Committee. He held that office at the time of his death.

As a chief executive of Rich's, "Mr. Dick," as employees called him, oversaw the store's tremendous expansions of the mid-twentieth century. Having moved to enlarged quarters on Broad Street in 1924, Rich's continued to expand in the 1940's and 1950's to become the largest department store in size and volume of sales in the southeast. The 1950's also saw the opening of Rich's first branch stores in Knoxville (a merger with S. H. George's which was sold in 1958) and in Atlanta at Lenox Square Shopping Center (1959). The company opened eight other branches in Atlanta and Birmingham before Rich died in 1975. They also opened several budget convenience stores, Richways, in Georgia and neighboring states. The Rich family played central roles in ownership and management of the store throughout the first one hundred and nine years of its existence. Then, in 1976, a year after Rich died, the company was sold to Federated Department Stores.

Rich served Rich's continuously from 1924 to 1975 with the exception of three years during World War II when he joined the U.S. Army Air Forces. Throughout his life, Rich actively participated in civic and charitable organizations and business associations. Among his many offices were founding chairman of the Atlanta Arts Alliance and the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority, and chairman of the Greater Atlanta Expressway Committee. He was president and life trustee of the Rich Foundation, a charitable non-profit corporation, and a member of The Temple (Jewish Reform religion), the Standard Town and Country Club, and the Atlanta City Club. Among his many awards were an Honorary Doctorate of Laws degree from Emory University in 1965, the National Retail Merchants' Association Gold Medal for outstanding retailer of the United States in 1963, the Tobe Award for distinguished service in retailing, the Atlanta Rotary Club's Armin Maier Cup for outstanding community service, and Georgia's Citizen of the Year, named by the Association of County Commissioners.

Scope and Content Note

The Richard H. Rich papers contain general correspondence, subject files, materials created by and about Rich's, Inc., family financial and legal papers, writings and printed materials, photographs, scrapbooks, memorabilia, and miscellany. The oldest items date from the early 1900's and are primarily photographs. The bulk of the collection dates from the early 1940's, around the time Rich joined the U.S. Army Air Force, to the time of his death in 1975. The large majority of these papers were Rich's office files and were transferred from his office in Rich's department store.

These papers document Rich's business career, his service to the Army, his extensive participation in local civic and business organizations, and, to a lesser extent, his role as a family man. Generally, papers relating to his business life are filed in the Rich's, Inc. series with frequent references to his role at Rich's found in the subject files and general correspondence. Similarly, Rich's active participation in local civic groups and in national business associations is represented most prominently in the subject files series with related materials in the Rich's, Inc., general correspondence, and financial and legal papers series. Finally, occasional folders in the subject files, general correspondence, and scrapbooks provide insight into Rich's personal life, habits, and beliefs.

The collection also describes the growth of the downtown store and downtown business community, changes in business and social practices, and movement into suburban malls. Expansions of the store, development of expressways and rapid transit systems, and overall development and beautification of downtown figure prominently in the Rich's, Inc. series. Issues of Rich Bits, the employee magazine, cover a fifty-five year period and reflect changing societal attitudes about work, relationships with employers, and segregation; for example, the separate Christmas parties held each year for black and white employees were featured in winter issues until the early 1960's. The decision in the 1950's to enlarge their potential market by moving into Atlanta neighborhoods and other area cities is documented through feasibility studies, planning reports, printed materials, and correspondence. Similar records outline the establishment of the Richway convenience stores.

Other topics and types of papers found in the collection include extensive files on the Atlanta Arts Alliance in the 1960's. Rich served as the first chairman of the Alliance and played a central role in fundraising campaigns to build a memorial arts center. The movement toward desegregating store facilities and the sit-ins of the early 1960's protesting store policies are covered in the Rich's, Inc. series. Papers relating to Hosea Williams's 1973 lawsuit against Rich for slander during a strike of black employees are found in the subject files. Nine scrapbooks containing correspondence, photographs, articles, newsclippings, and miscellaneous printed material document Rich's life from 1939 to 1975.

There are some gaps in the Rich papers. The role the Rich family played in Atlanta's Jewish community from the 1860's when Morris Rich opened shop to modern times is hardly mentioned. Indeed, except for the financial and legal series and papers about Rich's children in the subject files and photographs, there is little family material. Rich's youth and his early years at Rich's constitute another area of limited coverage. Finally, Rich's role as chairman of the Metropolitan Atlanta Rapid Transit Authority from 1965 to 1969 and the resulting defeat of a bond referendum to finance a rapid rail system is not covered in detail in the collection.

Correspondents include local, state, and national business and political leaders and other prominent persons. Among the names represented are Ivan Allen, Jr., James V. Carmichael, Dwight D. Eisenhower, William B. Hartsfield, Jesse Hill, Jr., Sinclair Jacobs, Stanley Marcus, Ralph McGill, Margaret Mitchell, Eliza Paschall, Richard B. Russell, Carl Sanders, Alan B. Shepard, Jr., Herman Talmadge, Robert W. Woodruff, and Andrew Young.

Series 1
General correspondence, 1938-1975
Boxes 1-4

Scope and Content Note

The series contains general correspondence about business, personal, civic and social concerns. Letters are between Rich and friends, business associates, U.S. Army officials, and local and national political leaders. The correspondence dates from 1938 to 1975. A large section of the series is letters and cards Rich received during his illness in the winter of 1975 and his replies to the well-wishers, as well as condolences received following his death. Other topics include travels, the death of his wife Virginia, developments and changes in the city of Atlanta, and civic and family concerns. Correspondence between Rich and his children and about specific civic organizations can be found in Series 2, Subject Files. Correspondents include Robert W. Woodruff, William B. Hartsfield, Margaret Mitchell, Herman Talmadge, and Carl Sanders.

Series 2
Subject files
Boxes 5-27

Scope and Content Note

Created largely by Rich and his secretarial staff, the Subject Files contain correspondence, newsclippings, reports, organizational records, and other materials relating to specific persons, events, and subjects. Biographical information about Rich is included as is correspondence, clippings, and other papers about his wife and three children. Correspondence between Rich and his children during their teens and early twenties reveals his parental concern for their well-being.

Rich's activities in various civic and business groups figure prominently in the series. As chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Atlanta Arts Alliance from 1963 to 1969, he oversaw the fund-raising and development campaigns which resulted in the dedication-of Atlanta's Memorial Arts Center. Rich's membership on the Board of Trustees of Young Harris College, the Richard B. Russell Foundation, and the Atlanta Rotary Club and on the advisory board of St. Joseph's Infirmary are represented as is his participation with several other civic and charitable groups.

Additionally, there are correspondence and organizational records for the corporations that Rich served as a member of the board of directors, as well as for Rich's long relationship with the U.S. Army. Other topics include the Atlanta Falcons, the Atlanta Symphony, travels in the U.S. and Europe, and other department stores.

Series 3
Rich's Inc. records, 1890-1981
Boxes 28-50, OP1

Scope and Content Note

This series concerns Rich's, Inc.'s operations, expansions, and relations to other stores and to the Atlanta business community from the 1930's to the 1970's. Correspondence, intra-store memorandums, printed reports, market studies, store publications, advertisements and promotions, and store miscellany are included. The series documents, to a degree, Rich's role in the development of the store as well as the growth of Rich's from a downtown dry goods store to a major department store chain with nine branches and several large discount convenience stores.

The daily functioning of the store, especially in the 1940's and 1950's when Rich was vice-president and president closely overseeing operations, is revealed through memos, charts, and reports of various departments, such as special services (protection), post office, and warehouses. Rich's membership in the Associated Merchandising Corporation is also shown. The AMC was an independently owned and operated corporation with twenty-eight of the nation's leading department stores as affiliates. As a member from 1943 to the mid-1970's, Rich's used the corporation for merchandising, planning, and evaluating their sales, management, personnel, and customer service policies.

A major section of this series concerns the branch store movement which began in 1954 with the opening of Rich's Knoxville and in 1959 with the opening of Atlanta's first major suburban shopping centers at Lenox Square and Belvedere. Market studies, contract negotiations, promotion plans, press packets for grand openings, and correspondence relate to several of the branches Rich's opened from 1954 to 1975. Many of the printed reports are also closely related to the branch store movement. Reports include feasibility and market studies for particular sites and detailed studies of developments in Atlanta which might affect store operations, such as downtown traffic studies, long-range plans of Georgia State College, and plans for the development of MARTA, the rapid transit system.

Other materials in the series include annual reports to stockholders dating from 1944 to 1980, employee magazines, Rich Bits, Little Bits, and News Bits dating from the 1920's to the 1970's, and pamphlets, brochures, handouts, booklets, and newsclippings put out by the store in special sales promotions and public service campaigns promoting the resources and attractions of Georgia and Atlanta. Store miscellany completes the series. This includes printed tributes to three of the store's leaders, Walter Rich, Frank Neely, and "Mr. Dick, Richard Rich. Six phonograph albums are also included as part of the Rich's, Inc. series. Four albums feature the vice-president of S. H. George's and the mayor of Knoxville announcing the merger of George's and Rich's in 1954. The other two albums were recorded at the Tobe Awards ceremony honoring Walter Rich for his leadership in the merchandising field in 1946.

Series 4
Financial and legal papers, 1922-1975
Boxes 51-72

Scope and Content Note

The financial and legal series contains the largest amount of Rich family materials in the collection. Financial ledgers, income, property, and estate tax records, banking, trust, personal financial, estate, insurance, and investment records plus miscellaneous records relating to charitable contributions and other financial concerns are filed here. Family members represented in the series are Rich, Virginia Lazarus Rich, Herman and Rosalind Rosenheim, Eldon and Hilda Lazarus, Charles and Katherine Reiser, Bee Rich Wolfe, Walter Rich, Marjorie Rich Giddens, Phillip Giddens, David H. Strauss and family, Maud Rich, and Maud S. Bass. The papers date from the early 1900's (David H. Strauss folders) to the 1970's.

Rich's personal financial transactions-are detailed in the ledgers (early 1950's to 1974), tax records (1935 - early 1970's) and banking records (1963 - 1973). The financial ledgers for Rich and one for Walter Rich (1930's - 1950) list types and amounts of investments, income and expenditures for these two leaders of Rich's. The tax records report forty years of Rich's gifts to charities, income, investments, inheritances and other financial information. The banking records include check stubs for Trust Company and First National of Atlanta accounts which indicate dates, amounts, recipients, and reasons for the checks. Typed lists showing bank balances, expenditures, and deposits are also filed here.

Trust records of several members of the Rich family make up a large portion of this series. Correspondence, account statements, copies of trust agreements, and tax forms comprise the records. They are for the Rich children under trusts established by Rich, his wife and their mothers, for Phillip Giddens under a trust of Marjorie Giddens Rich (Walter Rich's widow), Bee Rich Wolfe under a trust of Walter Rich, the Reiser family under trust accounts from Rosalind Rosenheim and Charles and Katherine Reiser, and the Strauss children under Oscar R. Strauss's trusts. Rich served as a trustee on all of these trusts. Correspondence is generally between trustees, bank officers, and trust recipients regarding expenditures and investments. One unusual item is an antenuptial agreement signed by Marjorie Rich Giddens and Phillip Giddens in 1949 stating that possessions of each person at the time of their marriage would remain individual rather than joint property.

The series contains a large section of estate records of Virginia Rich, Herman and Rosalind Rosenheim, Eldon and Hilda Lazarus, Maud Rich, Maud S. Bass, and David H. Strauss. These records include correspondence among family members, executors, and banking, investment, and legal officials. Estate tax returns and account statements regarding assets and distribution of the estates are also included.

Other records include personal financial records of Hilda Lazarus in the decade following her husband's 1955 death. The remaining papers document Rich's stock and bond investments, ownership of insurance policies, contributions to charities, charge account bills from Rich's (1965-1975), and materials relating to the purchase and renovation of his West Andrews Drive home.

Series 5
Writings and printed materials, 1938-1980
Boxes 73-75 and OP3

Scope and Content Note

Contained here are writings and printed materials by and about Rich and Rich's department stores. Speeches Rich wrote and delivered to civic groups, local and national business associations, college groups, and store employees from 1938 to 1974 are filed chronologically. Topics include current business trends, developments at Rich's, the post-war economy, and the importance of cooperation among merchants, employees, and city and community groups. Rich also had several articles published in periodicals and newsletters. Most of these discuss business and economic topics; they are filed chronologically.

Printed materials include local and national magazine and newspaper clippings about Rich and his family and about Rich's and the store's role in the growth of Atlanta. These too are filed chronologically.

Series 6
Photographs, circa 1902-1979
Boxes 76-77, OP 1, 3-5

Scope and Content Note

Photographs of Rich as a young boy, a businessman, a family man, a community leader, and a civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army dominate the series. Other photographs are of members of the Rich family, Rich's executive officers and directors, and scenes of the store in both modern and older, historic times. Childhood and portrait photographs of Rich from the early 1900's to 1975 show his maturing from a chubby young boy to a youthful merchant to an elderly leader of one of the south's major department store chains. Other photos of Rich picture him receiving awards at parties, dinners and meetings, attending Emory University functions and store ceremonies, and relaxing with his family. Snapshots of Brazil in 1944 are among the miscellaneous photographs completing this series.

Arrangement Note

Arrangement is largely by subject and a few of the photos have been left framed.

Series 7
Scrapbooks, 1937-1975
OBV 1-9

Scope and Content Note

The nine scrapbooks chronicle Rich's life from 1939 to 1975. Evidently prepared by Dorothy Lavine and other members of Rich's secretarial staff, the volumes are filled with correspondence, photographs, printed materials and occasional memorabilia. Rich's store activities, civic involvements, family life, and significant events through the years are highlighted. [Note: Original copies of correspondence, photographs, and articles and speeches written by Rich have been replaced with photocopies. Correspondence has been filed in Series 1, photographs in Series 6, and articles and speeches in Series 5. This was done as a conservation measure.]

Arrangement Note

Arranged in chronological order.

Index of Selected Correspondents

Correspondence with prominent local citizens, Atlanta business leaders, and local, state and national politicians is indexed here. Indexed items include correspondence written to and from the individuals. Correspondence in Series 1, General Correspondence, Series 2, Subject Files, and Series 3, Rich's, Inc., has been indexed. Index is to series number, box number, folder number, and number of items. For example, notation "Series 2 - 6:3 (1)" refers to Series 2, box 6, folder 3, with one item. Letters from the same series continue on the same line, e.g. "Series 3 - 32:4 (3); 48:14 (1)" connotes correspondence found in Series 3.

This is an index to selected correspondents rather than to all correspondents represented in Series 1-3. Materials such as newsclippings and photographs which relate to the named individual have not been indexed.
