Collection Description

Biographical Note

John Rozier was born October 30, 1918 in Sparta, Georgia, to Edward Alexander Rozier, a merchant, and Elleene Burnet Rozier, a piano teacher. He graduated with a BA from Emory University in 1940. During World War II he served in the U.S. Navy, achieving the rank of lieutenant senior grade. After the war, he returned to Emory and received his MA in journalism. For the next five years, Rozier served in the U.S. Department of State as a foreign service officer in Seoul, Korea (1947-1949), Chunking, China (1949), and as a vice consul in Beirut, Lebanon (1949-1952). He left government work in 1952 and became publisher of the Wrightsville Headlight (1956-1958) and the Henrico Herald (1956-1958). In 1958, he edited the feature section of the Atlanta Constitution and from 1959-1979 he was Director of Information Services for Emory University. He left his post at Emory when he received a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities to study political and social change in his native Hancock County, Georgia. Rozier died on January 8, 2011 in Atlanta, Georgia.

Publication Note

Published in Black Boss: Political Revolution in a Georgia County by John Rozier, Athens, Ga.: University of Georgia Press, 1982.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists primarily of source material for John Rozier's study of political leadership in Hancock County, Georgia, Black Boss: Political Revolution in a Georgia County, published by the University of Georgia Press in 1982. The book chronicles the political rise of John McCown, an African American who arrived in Hancock County in 1966 to begin massive poverty-fighting programs. Hancock County became the first black-controlled county in the south since Reconstruction. Most of the source material in this collection consists of newspaper clippings documenting the activities of McCown, the Georgia Council on Human Relations, and the East Central Committee for Opportunity. Correspondence, memoranda, materials relating to a 1974 riot, and McCown's criminal record document the tensions between black and white residents of the county. The collection also includes Rozier's research notes, typescripts of three chapters, and notes on oral interviews of residents of Hancock County in the 1960s and 1970s.

Arrangement Note

Arranged by subject.
