Collection Description

Biographical Note
Frank Lebby Stanton (February 22, 1857-January 7, 1927) poet and journalist, was born in Charleston, South Carolina, the son of Valentine Stanton, a printer, and Rebecca Parry Stanton. After the death of his father, (ca. 1868), Stanton's formal education ended and his family moved to Savannah, Georgia, where he went to work for the Savannah Morning News as a printer's devil. Joel Chandler Harris began work with the Morning News as an associate editor in 1870 and encouraged young Stanton to write. Stanton became a reporter and feature writer for the News, then moved in 1887 to Smithville, Georgia, where he edited the Smithville News. While in Smithville, he met and married Leona Josey. They had three children, Valentine (Val), born ca. 1890, Frank Jr., born 1895, and Marcelle, born ca. 1900.

After a brief period with the Rome (Ga.) Tribune, Stanton moved to Atlanta in 1889 at the suggestion of Joel Chandler Harris, who had been on the staff of the Atlanta Constitution since 1876. Stanton achieved notoriety with his daily column "Just From Georgia," which began publication ca. 1890 in the Constitution and continued until 1926. A compilation of poems, short stories, and philosophical advice, the column was one of the first of its kind to be published in the United States. Stanton's work was also published in magazines such as the Uncle Remus Magazine and The Christian Index, but it was the syndication of "Just From Georgia" which vastly increased his popularity as the "James Whitcomb Riley of the South," and as a "scrapbook poet."

Popular poems written by Stanton and inspired by his family are "Mighty Lak a Rose," "Jest a Wearyin' for You," and "Marcelle." The first collection of his poetry, Songs of a Day and Songs of the Soil, was published in 1892. It was followed by Songs of the Soil (1894), Comes One with a Song (1899), Songs from Dixie Land (1900), Up from Georgia, (1902), and Little Folks Down South (1904). Frank L. Stanton's Just from Georgia, compiled by his daughter Marcelle Stanton Megahee was published in 1927, after Stanton's death in that same year. Frank Stanton is buried in Westview Cemetery, Atlanta.

Biographical Source:Biographical information on Stanton can be found in the Dictionary of American Biography (Scribner's, 1935) and in biographical clippings located in Subseries 1.4 of the collection.

Scope and Content Note
These papers consist of materials produced by Frank L. Stanton, his family, and associates. They are divided into three main series, each titled by its originator or subject: Frank L. Stanton, Atlanta Constitution/Julian Harris, and Frank L. Stanton, Jr. Provenance of some items among this material is unclear and some of these specific items are mentioned in the series notes when appropriate.
The collection contains correspondence (1890-1948), handwritten and printed Stanton poems (ca. 1885-1921), scrapbooks (1895-1920, 1978), music and broadsides, photographs, cartoons and drawings, clippings and printed materials, biographical notes and short stories. Dated material bulks in the years between 1900 and 1928.

The collection's strength lies in the abundance of Stanton poetry and prose, preserved here in various stages of development. A major weakness is in the inability of Stanton's own papers to provide a more personal view of his life. A unique feature of the collection is the inclusion of material offering a look at the less public side of Stanton from the viewpoint of fellow journalist, Julian LaRose Harris.

Arrangement Note
Organized into three series: (1) Frank Stanton papers, (2) Atlanta Constitution / Julian Larose Harris papers and (3) Frank L. Stanton, Jr. papers.

Frank L. Stanton papers, 1885-1978
Boxes 1-4, OP 1-4, BV1, OBV 1

Scope and Content Note
This series includes material about Stanton collected or generated by either Stanton or his family. The series includes correspondence, writings, photographs, and printed material.

Correspondence (Subseries 1.1), which dates from 1890 to 1948, bulks between 1920 and 1928. Personal correspondence includes letters exchanged between Stanton and his family and friends. General and business correspondence includes that from publishers, a copyright form, a permission notice and "fan" letters, many of which include poems offered for publication. Family correspondence (those letters to and from family member excluding Stanton) includes a letter to Mrs. Stanton describing the Roycroft Shop and Inn of Aurora, New York, and many messages of sympathy from Stanton's admirers written at the time of the poet's death. Correspondents include Atlantans Clark Howell Warren Akin Candler, Samuel White Small, and Mildred (Woolley) Seydell and authors Charles William Hubner, William Nathaniel Harben, and James Whitcomb Riley. Each group of letters is filed chronologically.

Subseries 1.2 includes both Stanton's unpublished drafts and published writings. These are handwritten or typed drafts, newspaper proofs, published news columns put into scrapbooks, published sheet music, broadsides, the bulk of which date from ca. 1890-1920. The "Just From Georgia" scrapbook was compiled by a fan in Portland, Maine. The "Strathmore" scrapbook was compiled by Stanton and is a gathering of his columns and poems ca. 1915-1920. Poem drafts are filed in alphabetical order and are listed in an appendix after the container list.

The third subseries (1.3) is comprised of photographs, illustrations and drawings. The majority are images of Stanton. Original drawings are by Lewis C. Gregg and Vance Cotter. One drawing of Stanton and one drawing of his "Just From Georgia" character, Brother Dickey, (both by Gregg, 1903) were originally in the possession of Julian L. Harris who donated them to Emory University.

Most clippings and printed materials (Subseries 1.4) are biographical in nature. Includes are clippings concerning Leona and Marcelle Stanton and information on various Stanton homes. Also found here are an advertisement for the Frank Stanton Jr. Organization promoting the merits of Stanton's "Poem a Day" to newspapers across the nation, programs for functions at which Leona Stanton read her husband's work, and an article about the gift of the Stanton papers to Emory University. Two publications about Frank Stanton are also included, one edited by another Georgia poet laureate Wightman F. Melton, who was related to Stanton by marriage.

Arrangement Note
Organized into four subseries: (1.1) Correspondence, (1.2) Writings, (1.3) Photographs, illustrations and drawings, and (1.4) Clippings and printed material.

Series 2

Atlanta Constitution / Julian Larose Harris papers, 1894-1928; 1948

Box 5 (folders 1-6), OP 5

Scope and Content Note

The provenance of this material is unclear. Though possibly included in the original group of Stanton papers donated to Emory University, it appears that this material was kept on file at the Atlanta Constitution, and was originally collected by Julian L Harris. Harris had contemplated doing a biography of Stanton and had taken notes, which he called "Stantonia," on Stanton's life and activities while both men were employed with the Atlanta Constitution (ca. 1892-1907). Harris also preserved miscellaneous notes written by Stanton to Harris and other Constitution staff members.

Correspondence consists of letters of sympathy and poems sent to the Constitution after Stanton's death. Clippings are Atlanta Constitution related and may have been originally collected by Stanton. Unidentified drafts are of short stories, articles and speeches found with the "Stantonia" material but not related to it. A large portion of these drafts are probably Julian Harris's.

Biographical Note
Frank Stanton Jr., second son of Frank L. Stanton and Leona Josey Stanton, was born May 5, 1895 in Atlanta, Georgia. He was illustrating his father's "Just From Georgia" column by the time he was fifteen. Educated in Atlanta public schools and at the Chicago Art Institute (ca. 1912-1915), he edited Atlanta's Hearst Hustler (ca. 1919), created advertisements for Atlanta products and publications, and headed the Frank Stanton, Jr. Organization and the Frank Stanton, Jr. Publishing Company (ca. 1920-1921), which concentrated on syndicating and publishing his father's work. He became advertising manager and a vice-president for George Muse Clothing Company, ca. 1925, and created the logo the company has continued to use. Both he and his wife Dorothy Popham Stanton, whom he married in 1925, were killed in an automobile accident on January 17, 1932.

Scope and Content Note
This series consists of correspondence, cartoons, short stories, and a photograph. Personal correspondence is with family, friends, and business associates. Stanton's earlier published cartoons are included in a scrapbook he kept (1909-1912), and issues of the Hearst Hustler (1919), and Baltimore Trolley Topics. An advertisement done for Muse's (1928), and a Christmas card (1931) drawn for Lucian Harris are examples of Stanton's later work.
