Collection DescriptionBiographical Note

Leon Howard Sullivan (1922-2001) was born to Charles and Helen Sullivan of Charleston, West Virginia, on October 16, 1922. After graduating from West Virginia State College in 1943, Sullivan moved to New York City to attend Union Theological Seminary. Sullivan had been ordained a Baptist minister at the age of 18. He attended Union for 2 years, then Columbia University where he received a Masters in Religion in 1947. While in New York, Sullivan married his wife, Grace, in 1945. He served as pastor of the First Baptist Church in South Orange, New Jersey, from 1945 to 1950. In 1950, Sullivan and his wife moved to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, where he began his 38 year tenure as pastor of the Zion Baptist Church.

In the late 1950s, Sullivan organized a boycott of Philadelphia businesses that were not hiring African Americans. In 1964, he created the Opportunities Industrialization Centers (OIC) of America, whose mission was to provide practical job training to disadvantaged African Americans in Philadelphia. The organization has grown to include sixty affiliated programs in thirty states. Sullivan also founded OIC International in 1969.

In 1971, Sullivan was asked to serve on the Board of Directors of the General Motors Corporation, becoming the first African American to serve on the board of a major corporation. He served on the board for over twenty years. Beginning in the late 1970s, Sullivan became active in the movement to end apartheid in South Africa. In 1977, he developed the Sullivan Principles, a set of guidelines for companies with business ties to South Africa that encouraged equitable treatment and pay for black South African workers. Sullivan continued his involvement with the movement to end apartheid throughout the 1980s. In 1991, the first Leon H. Sullivan Summit was held in Abidjan, Côte d'Ivoire, with the mission to bring together African American and African leaders and work to improve the economic and social conditions of all Africans. The summits are now held biennially.

During his career as a minister and social activist, Sullivan published several books, including America Is Theirs (1948), Build Brother Build (1969), and Philosophy of a Giant (1979). In 1999, the Global Sullivan Principles of Social Responsibility were formally introduced at the United Nations. Sullivan died on April 24, 2001 in Scottsdale, Arizona.

Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of the papers of Leon Howard Sullivan from 1939-2001. The collection documents Sullivan's work with the Zion Baptist Church in Philadelphia and the numerous organizations he founded to address minority employment, South African apartheid, and community development in the United States and in Africa. The papers consist of correspondence; personal financial and subject files; records relating to International Foundation for Education and Self-Help, Opportunities Industrialization Centers, Progress Investment Associates, and other organizations in which he participated; writings; photographs; and audiovisual material

Arrangement Note

Organized into seven series: (1) Correspondence, (2) Personal papers, (3) Organizations, (4) Sullivan Principles, (5) Published and unpublished writings, (6) Photographs, and (7) Audiovisual material.

Correspondence, 1942-1999
Boxes 1-9

Scope and Content Note

This series consists of correspondence between Sullivan and individuals involved in church, community, business, and political activities from 1942-1999. The bulk of the correspondence includes letters to Sullivan on behalf of companies, political figures, and community leaders. Many prisoners and others in duress also wrote to Sullivan for help. Other correspondence includes matters related to Zion Baptist Church, complaints and hate mail directed against Sullivan, and personal legal and financial communication. From 1970-1993, Sullivan wrote many job recommendation letters for former employees, friends, and acquaintances; these recommendations are found at the end of the series.

Correspondence directly relating to operations of the Sullivan Principles, the Opportunities Industrialization Centers, International Foundation for Education and Self-Help, and other major organizations with which Sullivan was involved are primarily located in Series 3: Organizations and Series 4: Sullivan Principles. However, some correspondence pertaining less directly to these organizations is interfiled in this series.

Boxes 10-15; OP1-4, 11-12

Scope and Content Note

This series contains biographical and legal material related to Sullivan and his immediate family, awards Sullivan received, and printed material Sullivan collected from newspapers and magazines. The first section of the series includes appointment books, passports, schedules, and general biographical information. Sullivan's awards include files related to his nomination for the Nobel Peace Prize, for which he was officially nominated in 1995, the Medal of Freedom in 1991, and other certificates of merit or appreciation. Financial and legal records include Sullivan's will, travel expense reports, financial disclosure reports, and banking statements. The newspaper and magazine clippings in this series (1960-2001) all pertain directly to Sullivan. Other printed material in this series includes programs for events in which Sullivan participated. For clippings and printed material related to the organizations with which he was involved, refer to Series 3: Organizations.

Series 3
Organizations, 1950-2001
Boxes 16-53; OP5-10

Scope and Content Note

This series contains material related to organizations that Sullivan founded or in which he participated from 1950-2001. The records are primarily related to Sullivan's major endeavors with the International Foundation for Education and Self-Help and the Opportunities Industrialization Centers. Other material in this series relates to Zion Baptist Church, where Sullivan was a pastor, and the Progress Investment Associates, an organization in Philadelphia started by the congregation of Zion Baptist Church.

Arrangement Note

Organized into three subseries: (3.1) International Foundation for Education and Self-Help, (3.2) Opportunities Industrialization Centers, and (3.3) Other organizations.

Subseries 3.1

International Foundation for Education and Self-Help, 1982-1999

Boxes 16-22; OP5-6

Historical Note

The International Foundation for Education and Self-Help was founded by Leon Sullivan in 1981. The organization focuses on Sub-Saharan Africa, implementing self-help partnership programs in education, healthcare, conflict mitigation and community development. IFESH has established more than 20 programs, including the African-African American Summit, the Peoples Investment Fund for Africa, the Self-Help Investment Program, Teachers for Africa, and Schools for Africa.

Scope and Content Note

The subseries contains records of the International Foundation for Education and Self-Help (IFESH) from 1982-1999. The records include correspondence, financial records, legal records, reports, printed material, and subject files. Correspondence is mostly to or from Leon Sullivan and relates to board meetings and IFESH program implementation. Financial and legal records include budgets and expenditure reports and documentation relating to IFESH's status as a non-profit organization. Reports include annual reports and reports on individual programs as well as collected reports from other national and international foundations relating to Africa.

The subject files in this subseries relate mostly to individual IFESH programs. Files include some correspondence, printed material such as brochures and newspaper clippings, and memos and reports. The African African-American Summit files make up the bulk of these subject files and also include planning material for the semiannual conference.

Subseries 3.2

Opportunities Industrialization Centers, 1964-1999

Boxes 22-48; OP7-9

Historical Note

In 1964, Sullivan opened the first Opportunities Industrialization Center (OIC) in an old jail in Philadelphia. OIC offered life skills classes and vocational training. Students enrolled to complete a GED, learn interview skills, or take job-specific courses in fields such as secretarial skills, bookkeeping, plumbing, brick masonry, welding, or drafting. OIC also worked with local industries to assure that necessary skills were being taught and to place graduates in jobs.

OIC began to expand outside of Philadelphia and across the United States in 1965. Groups that wanted to establish a new OIC would contact the OIC headquarters for assistance in creating a center. OIC began holding an annual Convocation in 1969, a national event for OIC employees and graduates. In 1969, OIC began to expand into Africa. External assistance came largely through USAID. OICs were gradually established in other locations as well, with some in Europe and in various other places, including Australia, India, Haiti and Canada.

With the global expansion of OIC, the leadership was divided between Opportunities Industrialization Centers America (OICA) and Opportunities Industrialization Centers International (OICI).

Scope and Content Note

The series consists of records related to the Opportunities Industrialization Centers from 1964-1999. Files include correspondence, printed material, reports, board minutes, financial records, subject files, and individual files relating to local centers.

Arrangement Note

Organized into two subsections: (3.2.a) Opportunities Industrialization Centers International and (3.2.b) Opportunities Industrialization Centers America.

Subseries 3.2aOpportunities Industrialization Centers International, 1970-1997*Boxes 22-26*Scope and Content Note

This subsection contains records for Opportunities Industrialization Centers International (OICI) from 1970-1997. The records include administrative and subject files and location files. Administrative and subject files document OICI leadership, strategies, and expansion possibilities. They include correspondence, reports, OICI publications, and material related to the board of directors. Location files contain information regarding specific OICs, including correspondence and reports.

Subseries 3.2bOpportunities Industrialization Centers America, 1964-1999*Boxes 26-48; OP7-9*Scope and Content Note

This subsection contains records related to Opportunities Industrialization Centers America (OICA) from 1964-1999. The records include administrative files, correspondence, location files, printed material, and subject files. Administrative files include annual reports, budgetary information, and expansion plans. Convocations and events files contain printed material and planning documents for OIC national events. Correspondence files contain general OIC correspondence and includes letters from Elizabeth Dole, Edward Kennedy, Henry Kissinger, Strom Thurmond, and various foreign heads of state. Correspondence relevant to particular OIC locations or events is filed across the series. Location files contain reports, correspondence, plans, and printed material relevant to local OIC branches.

This subseries also includes correspondence, reports, and other subject files related to the Opportunities Service Center (OSC), an organization that worked in tandem with OIC, primarily addressing housing projects across the country.

Other material in this series includes newspaper and magazine clippings; and pamphlets, newsletters, reports and brochures published by OICA. Subject files document sub-organizations that fell under the umbrella of OICA including the National Industrial Advisory Council (NIAC), Opportunities Academy Management Training (OAMT), and the Human Development Center, among others.

Subseries 3.3
Other organizations, 1950-2001
Boxes 48-53; OP10

Scope and Content Note

This series contains material related to other organizations that Sullivan was involved in or that interested Sullivan. The two major organizations documented in this subseries are Zion Baptist Church (Philadelphia, Pennsylvania), where he served as pastor, and the Progress Investment Associates, an organization Sullivan founded to encourage giving by members of his congregations. Material documenting the Progress Investment Associates includes printed reports, financial records, minutes and subject files. Zion Baptist Church materials include bulletins, financial records, and files related to church committees. This subseries also includes individual subject files related to other organizations in which Sullivan participated or supported, including General Motors, where he served on the Board of Directors.

Series 4

Sullivan Principles, 1971-1999

Boxes 54-71

Scope and Content Note

This series consists of correspondence and subject files on the Sullivan Principles from 1971-1999. Developed in 1977 by Reverend Sullivan, the Sullivan Principles are corporate codes of conduct designed to promote corporate social responsibility. The original Sullivan Principles targeted U.S. corporations in South Africa, aiming to end apartheid through economic pressure. The Global Sullivan Principles, which went into effect in 1999, aim to promote corporate social responsibility on the international level.

The general correspondence (1971-1995) mainly includes correspondence between Sullivan and corporations that were signatories to the Sullivan Principles, as well as a smaller amount of correspondence with various other organizations involved in apartheid.

Sullivan kept two types of subject files: materials concerning politics and social justice in South Africa, which he kept in chronological files by year (1971-1997); and subject files on the administration of the Sullivan Principles, from his announcement of the Principles in 1977 through the development of the Global Sullivan Principles in 1999. The South Africa subject files contain reports, notes, clippings, and brochures related to events or organizations with which Sullivan was not directly involved. The majority of the material concerns the effects of apartheid on employment, housing, and education. Some material pertains to the effects of the Sullivan Principles on corporate practices in South Africa. The administrative subject files include correspondence and printed material pertaining to operations of the committees, organizations, and conventions that regulated the Sullivan Principles. Sullivan also wrote a number of speeches and articles on the Sullivan Principles; for these, refer to the writing series.

Series 5

Published and unpublished writings, 1939-1999

Boxes 72-90

Scope and Content Note

This series consists of writings primarily by Sullivan from the 1939-1999. The series contains drafts and published copies of articles, books, interviews, sermons, songs and prayers, speeches, and writings by others. Sullivan's writings include multiple drafts and notes. When identifiable, these notes have been kept with the finished and published versions of his writings.

Sullivan's articles (1969-1995) address black advancement, the Sullivan Principles, and concerns of various organizations with which he was involved. The books section contains notes, drafts, and proofs of his books. Interviews (1971-1992), the smallest section, contains transcripts and clippings of interviews of Sullivan in magazines, on talk shows, and to various organizations. Prayers, poetry, and religious songs composed by Sullivan form another small section. Sermons and speeches comprise the largest part of the series. Nearly all sermons were delivered at Zion Baptist Church (Philadelphia, Pennsylvania) during Sullivan's tenure as minister (1950-1988). The sermons frequently combine religious lessons with calls for social and political activism, both in the black community at home and in Sub-Saharan and South African communities. Sullivan often wrote several versions of the same speech, sometimes changing its name. Different versions are kept in the same folder and are cross-listed by title. Speeches (1967-1999) were given at board meetings, commencement ceremonies, Opportunities Industrialization Centers events, and upon receipt of awards and honorary degrees. Some speeches are also Congressional testimony.

This series also includes writings by others (1971-1994), which include drafts of speeches, articles, sermons, and Congressional testimony by various individuals involved with Sullivan.

Subseries 7.1
Video recordings, 1984-1999
Box AV1

Scope and Content Note

This subseries contains video recordings featuring Sullivan or related to his work from 1984-1999. Many videos feature Sullivan's television appearances and television coverage of his organizations. These videos show Sullivan's speaking style and public recognition of his work. A number of videos were created by the Opportunities Industrialization Centers or the African-African American Conference and provide insight into the aims and workings of Sullivan's various organizations. In addition to the videos featuring Sullivan are the videos collected by Sullivan, related to GM, investment in South Africa and social justice causes. The series also contains some videos related to vocational training or life skills. There is also an amateur video of a Jesse Jackson campaign rally in Philadelphia featuring Louis Farrakhan as a speaker.

Arrangement Note

Arranged into two sections: those featuring Sullivan and those not featuring Sullivan. Within the sections videos are arranged chronologically.
