enter private practice and teach surgery at Emory University. He interrupted his practice to serve in the U. S. Army and spent three and one-half years as a P.O.W. in Japan. His experiences as a P.O.W. were the basis for his book, Barbed-Wire Surgeon (1948). A series of articles first published in the Atlanta Journal (1963) were subsequently published as As I Saw Russia (1963). Weinstein was a member of many professional, religious, and civic organizations including B'nai B'rith. As a sculptor, he exhibited his work at the Fogg Art Museum at Harvard and the Atlanta High Museum of Art.

Scope and Content Note

The collection contains the papers of Alfred Abraham Weinstein from 1940-1976. The papers include correspondence, clippings, photographs, awards, scrapbooks, galley proofs, articles, audiotapes, phonograph records. Galley proofs, some correspondence, articles, clippings, and scrapbooks pertain to his writings. Awards, framed and unframed, are from professional, religious, and civic organizations including B'nai B'rith. Scrapbooks, containing clippings, correspondence, and photographs are both personal and professional. Photographs are of Weinstein and his family. Other correspondence includes letters from Harry Truman and Dwight Eisenhower. Audiotapes and phonograph records are of speeches and interviews given by Weinstein. Galley proofs were published as Weinstein, Alfred Abraham, Barbed-Wire Surgeon (New York: Macmillan Company, 1948).
