Collection Description

Biographical Note

William Butler Yeats, Irish poet, dramatist, and Nobel laureate in literature (1923), was the eldest son of John Butler Yeats and Susan (Pollexfen) Yeats. He was born near Dublin on 13 June 1865, but he spent much of his youth in County Sligo, where most of his relatives lived. Those environs of western Ireland profoundly affected Yeats throughout his life, as did his exposure through schooling to theosophy, mysticism, the occult, and the Irish saga.

Maud Gonne [MacBride] (who appeared in Cathleen ni Houlihan, Yeats' most popular play) and John O'Leary also influenced Yeats. They kindled an enthusiasm for Irish nationalism in him that emphasized Irish culture and civilization particularly but dealt with political issues as well.

Another strong influence in Yeats' life was Lady Augusta Gregory, who also embraced Irish nationalism and the blossoming Irish Renaissance. With Lady Gregory's support and collaboration, Yeats' play The Countess Cathleen was performed in Dublin in 1899. The production marked the foundation of an Irish theatre which became firmly established in 1904 with the opening of the Abbey Theatre.

When Yeats was not involved in theater or foreign travel, he divided his time between Coole Park (Lady Gregory's home) and London. In 1917, after an unrequited proposal to Maud Gonne's daughter Iseult, Yeats married George Hyde-Lees (1893-1968); Ezra Pound was best man. The marriage produced two children, Anne (1919- ) and Michael (1921- ).

In 1922, Yeats accepted nomination to the Senate of the Irish Free State. He participated actively in those proceedings, sometimes contrary to the prevailing Catholic mood, until his term expired in 1928.

With the award of the Nobel Prize for Literature in 1923, Yeats' international stature grew considerably. In 1925 he published his philosophical work A Vision and in 1928 The Tower, the latter generally thought to represent the peak of his poetic achievement.

In the late twenties, near the end of his senatorial term, illness and fatigue forced Yeats to reduce the activities of his public life, and he spent the first few months of 1928 in Rapallo, Italy, with Ezra Pound. Rapallo agreed with Yeats. His return there in 1929 marked a highly creative period that saw the composition of A Packet for Ezra Pound as well as framework for his new edition of A Vision.

Thereafter, Lady Gregory's increasing infirmity in her old age prompted Yeats to spend lengthier periods of time with her in Coole. After her death in 1932, he made a final lecture tour to the United States (his first had been with John Quinn in 1903-04), traveled frequently to Italy and the Mediterranean, and continued writing and publishing until his death on 28 January 1939. His grave lies at Drumcliffe, County Sligo. Sources consulted in preparing this note include: "Yeats, W. B.,” Dictionary of National Biography, 1931-1940 (London, 1949); Joseph Hone, W. B. Yeats, 1865-1939 (London, 1942); J. I. M. Stewart, Eight Modern Writers, (Oxford, 1966); Richard Ellmann, Yeats: The Man and the Masks (corrected edition with a new preface, Oxford, 1979).
Publication Note

Scope and Content Note
The collection consists of literary manuscripts, holograph notes in and emendations to published texts, letters, and photographs relating to William Butler Yeats. Materials date from 1875 to 1965, but most come from the period ca. 1890-1939. These items have been grouped together from various sources by virtue of their authorship by William Butler Yeats or their relationship to him.

Among the literary manuscripts are holograph and typescript drafts and fair copies of Yeats's poetry and plays, including numerous corrections, deletions, and additions written or typed in to several published works. Prose includes a corrected typescript of his More Memories, which describes his part in the formation of the Irish Literary Society and the Irish national theater which as to become the Abbey Theatre.

Also included are twenty-nine letters (1887-1938), from Yeats to various of his acquaintances, in which he discusses his poetic and dramatic works, Irish politics, the Abbey Theatre, and his personal life. Many of the letters are addressed to his longtime friend and compatriot Lady Gregory. Another group of letters is addressed to Yeats' publisher T. Werner Laurie and relates to the publication of the 1925 edition of A Vision.

In addition, the collection includes a group of pictures portraying Yeats, his family, and his friends and associates. Among these are several pencil sketches by John B. Yeats, lithographic reproductions of portrait drawings and paintings, as well as some thirty-five snapshots (ca. 1910-1935). Maud Gonne MacBride, Yeats at Rapallo (1929), and "locales" form three distinct subjects among these various photographs. The collection also includes a framed portrait of Yeats taken by A.L. Coburn in Dublin, January 24, 1908.

Arrangement Note
Organized into three series: (1) Literary manuscripts, (2) Letters, and (3) Photographs and artwork.
Description of Series

Series 1: Literary manuscripts, 1888-1939
Series 2: Letters, 1887-1938
Series 3: Photographs and artwork, 1875-1968
Series 1
Literary manuscripts, 1888-1939
Box 1

Scope and Content Note
Yeats's literary writings include working drafts, fair copies, revisions of published text preparatory to subsequent editions, typescript and holograph notes about particular works or passages, as well as brief commentaries on literary topics. Dated items range from 1888-1939, but most are from the early 1900s; many items bear no date. Unless otherwise noted, items described as "autograph" or "signed" are in Yeats's hand.

Descriptions of some items in the following list include bracketed call numbers. These call numbers refer to books held by Special Collections in which the described items appear; photocopies of these items have been placed in the boxed folders listed below.

Other bracketed designations (e.g., [I-347] and [Add1]) refer to item descriptions appearing in Sotheby's auction catalogs of 23-24 July 1979 [I], 17 December 1979 [II], or to additional acquisitions to the collection. Asterisks (*) denote variants not found in The Variorum Edition of the Poems of W. B. Yeats (New York, 1957) and The Variorum Edition of the Plays of W. B. Yeats (London, 1966).

Arrangement
This series is arranged alphabetically within the following categories: poems (followed by untitled poems), plays, prose (articles and brief commentaries), and revisions in collected works and other publications.

Series 2
Letters, 1887-1938
Boxes 2 - 3

Scope and Content Note
This series (81 items; 106 pieces) comprises an eclectic compilation of letters (1887-1938) from Yeats to various of his acquaintances. Many are addressed to Lady Gregory, an ardent Irish nationalist with whom Yeats collaborated on numerous theatrical and political undertakings. Another group of letters is addressed to Yeats' publisher T. Werner Laurie and relates to the publication of A Vision.

The letters concern various topics: Yeats's poetic and dramatic works, politics, the Abbey Theatre, and reflections about Yeats's family and his personal life. Several letters discuss controversy surrounding Sir Hugh Lane's art collection; another group reflects Yeats's concern about the health problems of Maud Gonne MacBride's son-in-law, Francis Stuart.

Bracketed designations (e.g., [I-347] and [Add1]) refer to item descriptions appearing in Sotheby's auction catalogs of July 23-24, 1979 [I], 17 December 1979 [II], or to additional acquisitions to the collection. WBY denotes William Butler Yeats; AG denotes Lady Gregory.

There is also some Yeats family correspondence, including notes from Elizabeth Yeats to her cousin Grace.

Scope and Content Note
In August 1980, the Special Collections Department acquired a collection of photographs and other pictures from Emory University's Woodruff Professor of English Literature Richard Ellmann. Ellmann had collected these items during the course of his research, and most of the identifications that appear on the verso of these pictures are in his hand.

Additional original sketches, drawn on the leaves of published works and acquired separately from the Ellmann collection, are also listed below. Descriptions for these items include bracketed call numbers referring to the books in which the drawings appear; photocopies of these sketches have been placed in the boxed folders listed below.
